FOREWORD:

Ten volumes of THE TYEE have been published, yet this, the eleventh, is a pioneer. Recognizing the high degree of efficiency which the Department of Journalism had reached, as well as the need for its encouragement, the Manager decided to have the book printed on the Campus. This gives THE NINETEEN ELEVEN TYEE the distinction of being the first annual ever printed by an American college on its own press. We feel that the book has not suffered by this experiment, and the benefits derived will be amply shown in more nearly perfect Annuals of future years.

The Cradle of the University.

Greater Washington

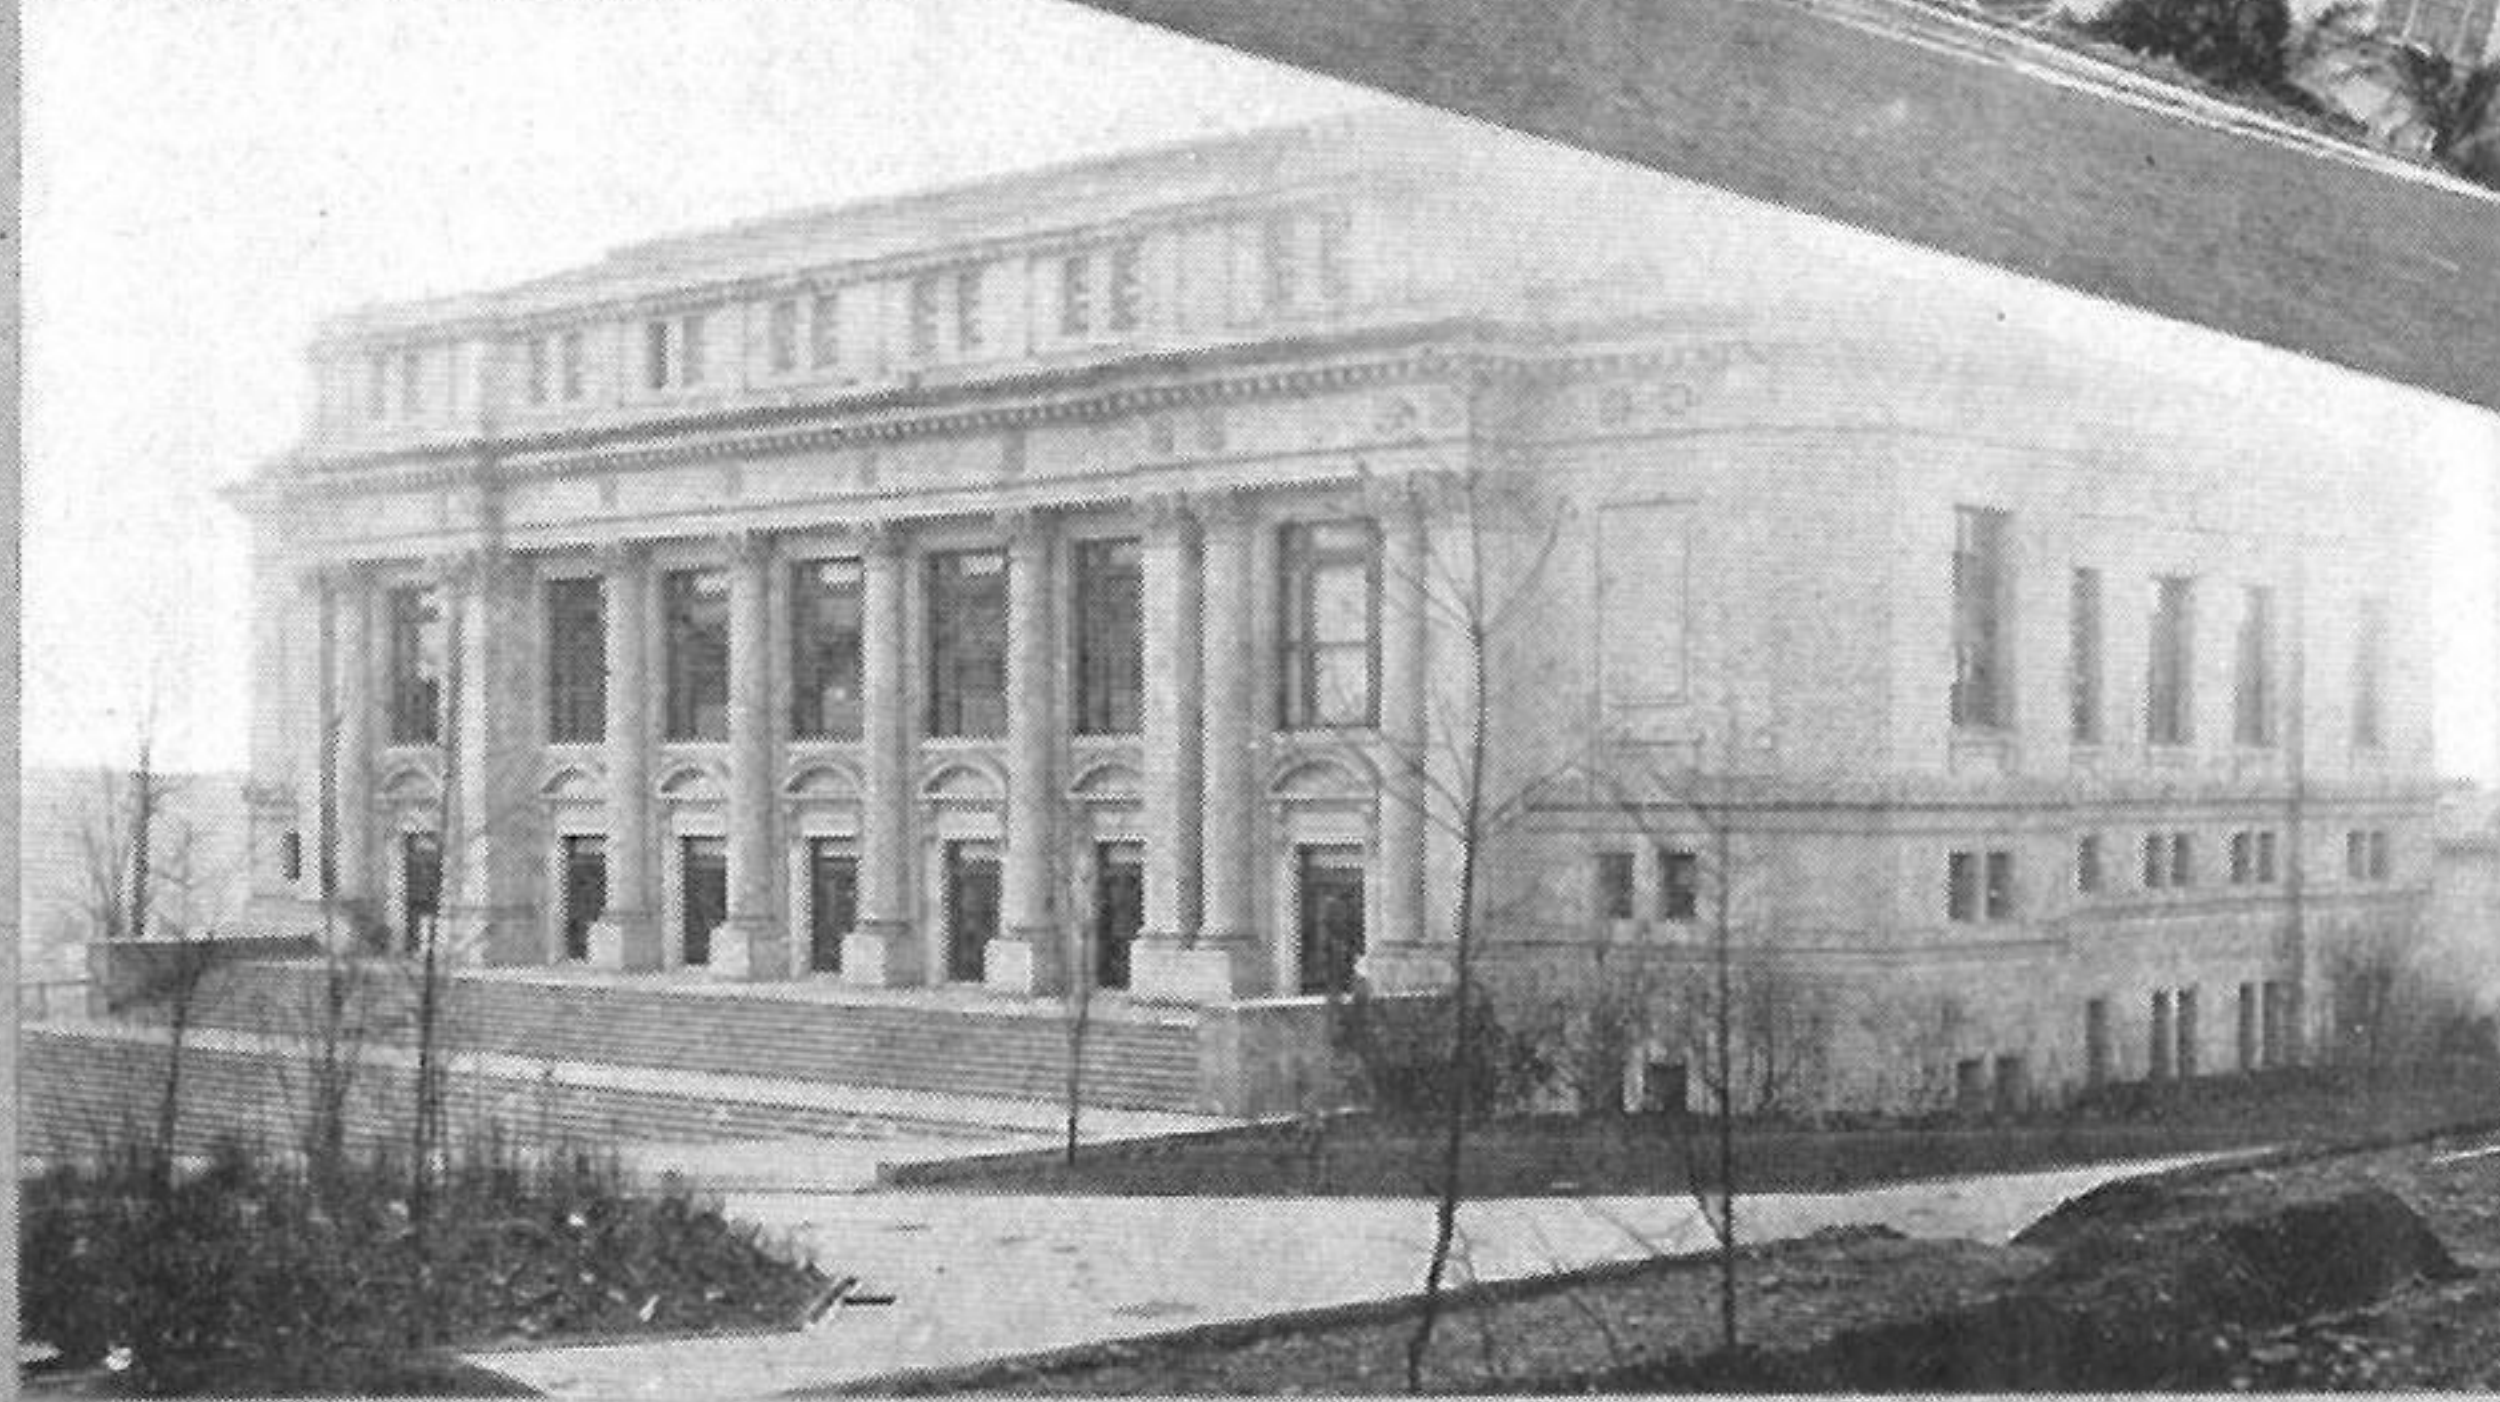

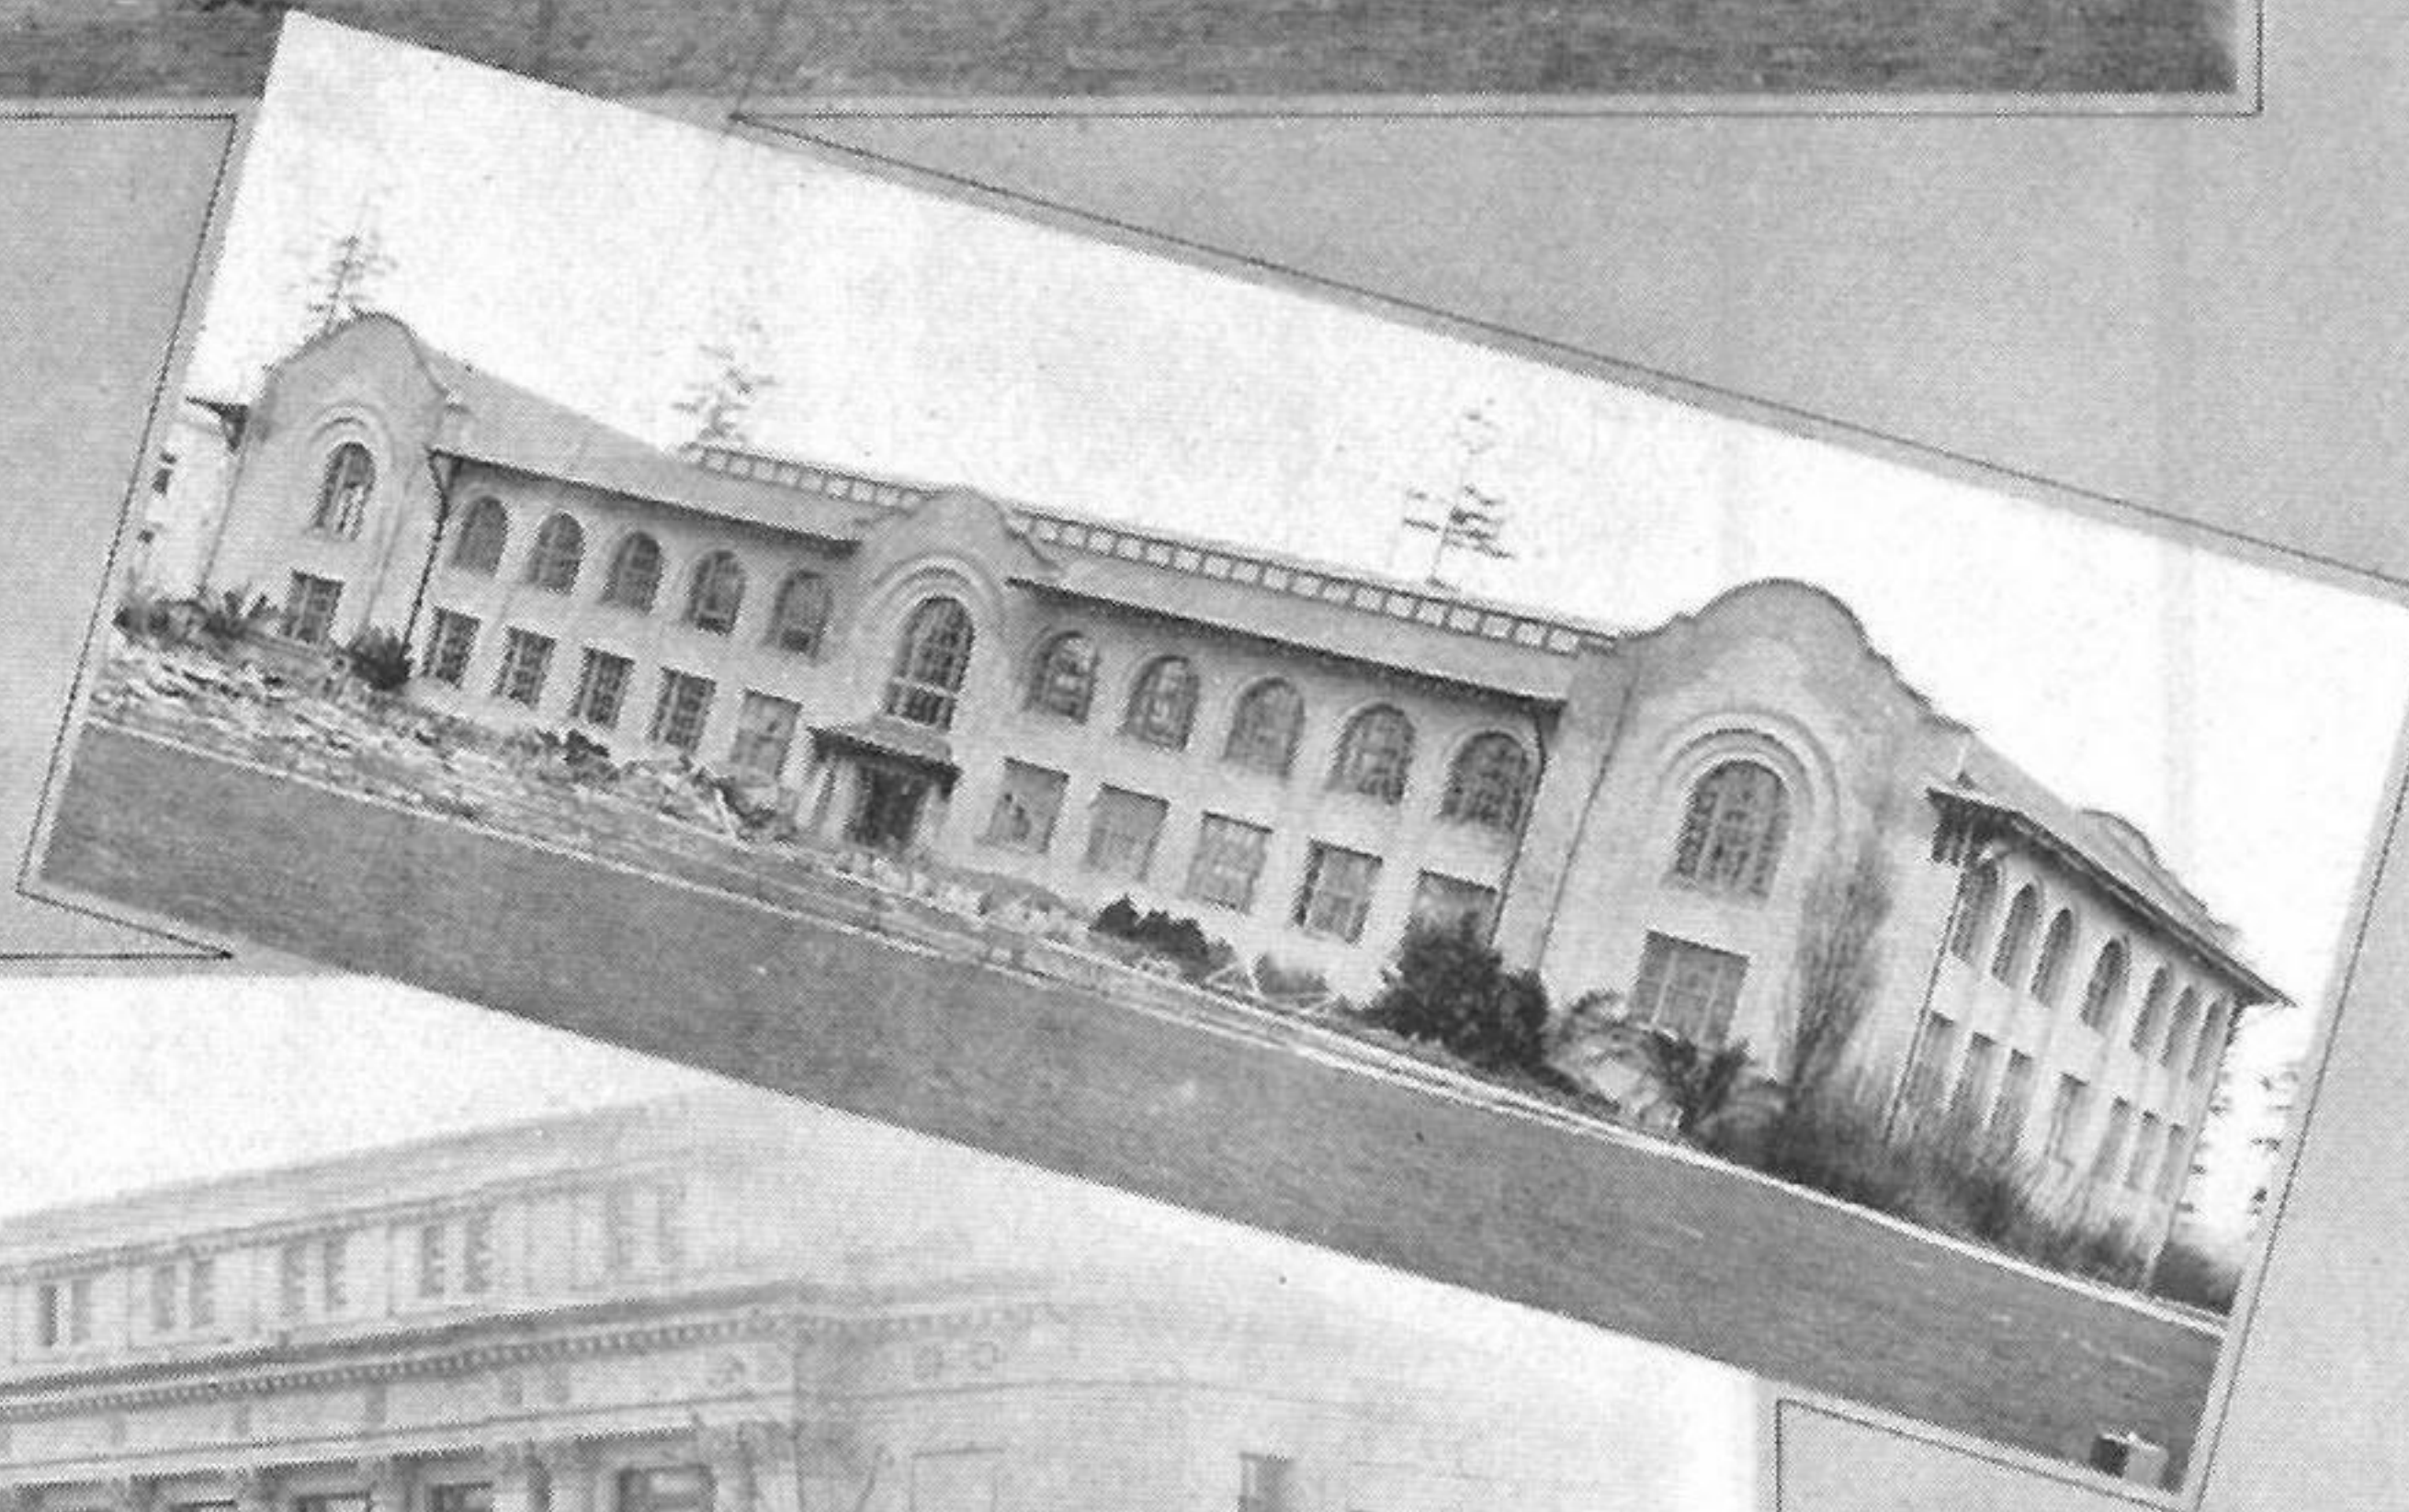

By PRESIDENT KANE.

The term, Greater Washington, suggests, first, at the close of the Exposition, the increased number of buildings. While we could not regard this the first element of the Greater Washington in point of importance, it is a necessity to the University's growth and development.

Five buildings were constructed out of the appropriation of $600,000 made directly to the University: the Auditorium Building, the Chemistry Building, the Engineering Building, the new Power House and the Foundry Building; the new Power House, in turn, releasing the building previously used as a Power House to be used as a building for the School of Mines. Nine regular Exposition buildings have been adapted to direct university uses: The Washington State Building as a library; the Forestry Building for the School of Forestry and museum purposes; the Educational Building for the departments of Education and Journalism; the Good Roads Building for Good Roads and Engineering work; the Oregon Building for the Law School and general class-rooms; the California Building for the Museum; the Philippine Building for the Mines Rescue Training Station Laboratories; the Oriental Building for an Armory; the Administration Building for the University Administrative Offices. Besides these, eleven buildings have been made available for subsidiary university purposes: The New York Building for the President's residence; the Hoo Hoo House for a Faculty Club; the Arctic Building for the Men's Club; the Women's State Building for the Women's Club; the Michigan Building for a residence for the University engineer; the Women's League and Baptist Buildings for residences; the Dairy Building for a carpenter shop and machinery; the Model Dairy Barn for a University barn; the Life-Saving Station Building for the use of the crew, and the Masonic Building to be used for University purposes not now definitely assigned.

In connection with the buildings should be mentioned the improvements on the grounds, amounting to about $300,000, and especially the paved streets and walks and, likewise, the natural theater and music pavilion and the greenhouses.

These additional buildings are to help provide room for the rapidly increasing enrollment of the University, which for the present year, 1909-10, is 1,870 for the regular and 285 for the summer session, making a total enrollment for the year, counting out duplicates, 2,085. About 56 per cent. of these students are twenty-one years of age or older and, aside from the students in the three months' forestry course and prospectors' course, only 122 students of the regular sessions are irregular in their university standing.

The faculty of the University is made up of 125 persons, including 58 professors, associate and assistant professors; 44 instructors, 10 lecturers and 13 graduate assistants, not counting 19 undergraduate assistants and the officials whose work is closely related to that of the faculty, nor that of the library force. Of the professors, twenty-six have been here five years or longer, nine have been here over ten years and two of the men have been on the faculty continuously for fifteen years. The men on the faculty have had degrees from 61 colleges and universities in this country and abroad.

The University has now eight separate schools, besides so distinct departments as Education and Journalism and the U. S. laboratories for timber testing and for the mines rescue training station.

The equipment in these different schools and departments is indicated by the University library, containing 39,500 bound volumes. The encouragement given to scholarship is indicated by the various scholarships and prizes for special work, the last addition to this list being the three Sarah Loretta Denny fellowships of $400 each. The results of the University's work and the pride of Greater Washington is in the increasing number of alumni who are showing themselves capable of doing the world's work.

Thy Secret, Oh My Soul

I.

Oh sway and swing on outspread pinions strong,
Thou king of ether's height, soar on and swing.
While billowed there, thy glances upward fling
And, searching, scan the distant starry throng
For one bright sign to lead the hosts along
That fabled path where holy angels sing,
Where music tells of love and trumpets ring
Their notes of joyful peace, ring loud and long.

Returnest thou to earth without a sign?
And didst thou find no fire to tip thy tongue,
No music heard by angel voices sung?
And now must strain for food thy hours confine;
Must fire of stars be quenched in ocean's brine
And lifts thy wing no soul by torture wrung?

II.

In hollow darksome cave I delve and grope
To wrest from earth some deftly hidden hint,
Some ray by whatsoever flick'ring glint
Might tell whence came man's faith, his clinging hope,
And by its light reveal life's rugged slope.
While nature's hoard takes never heed of stint
Or form of wealth in rudely fashioned mint,
She bids her son to dig and bravely cope.

Then cope with ev'ry snag that strews thy way,
Yet search, my soul, for rays that flit and dart,
O'erleap their crusts of stone and fly apart—
Such fitful rays as gleam while sinners pray
And hold by grace their wolfish ills at bay.
Is't here, my light, in crystal's glowing heart?

III.

Thou perfumed herald, velvet petalled rose,
 Were angels swinging censers at thy birth;
 Does Heaven ope her gates and toss to earth
 Such gift of holy love that breathes and glows?
 Pray tell me ere those swinging gates shall close
 May hungry soul of man escape this lowly dearth
 And rise to mingle there in everlasting mirth
 Beneath the eyes of One who feels and knows?

I know thy arms may bruise with jagged thorn,
 Thy hands reach down and grasp the yielding soil
 To brave the storm and sway in proud recoil.
 What time thy beauteous crowns are crushed or torn
 I see in thee some longing souls forlorn
 Who cling to earth yet bloom through faith and toil.

IV.

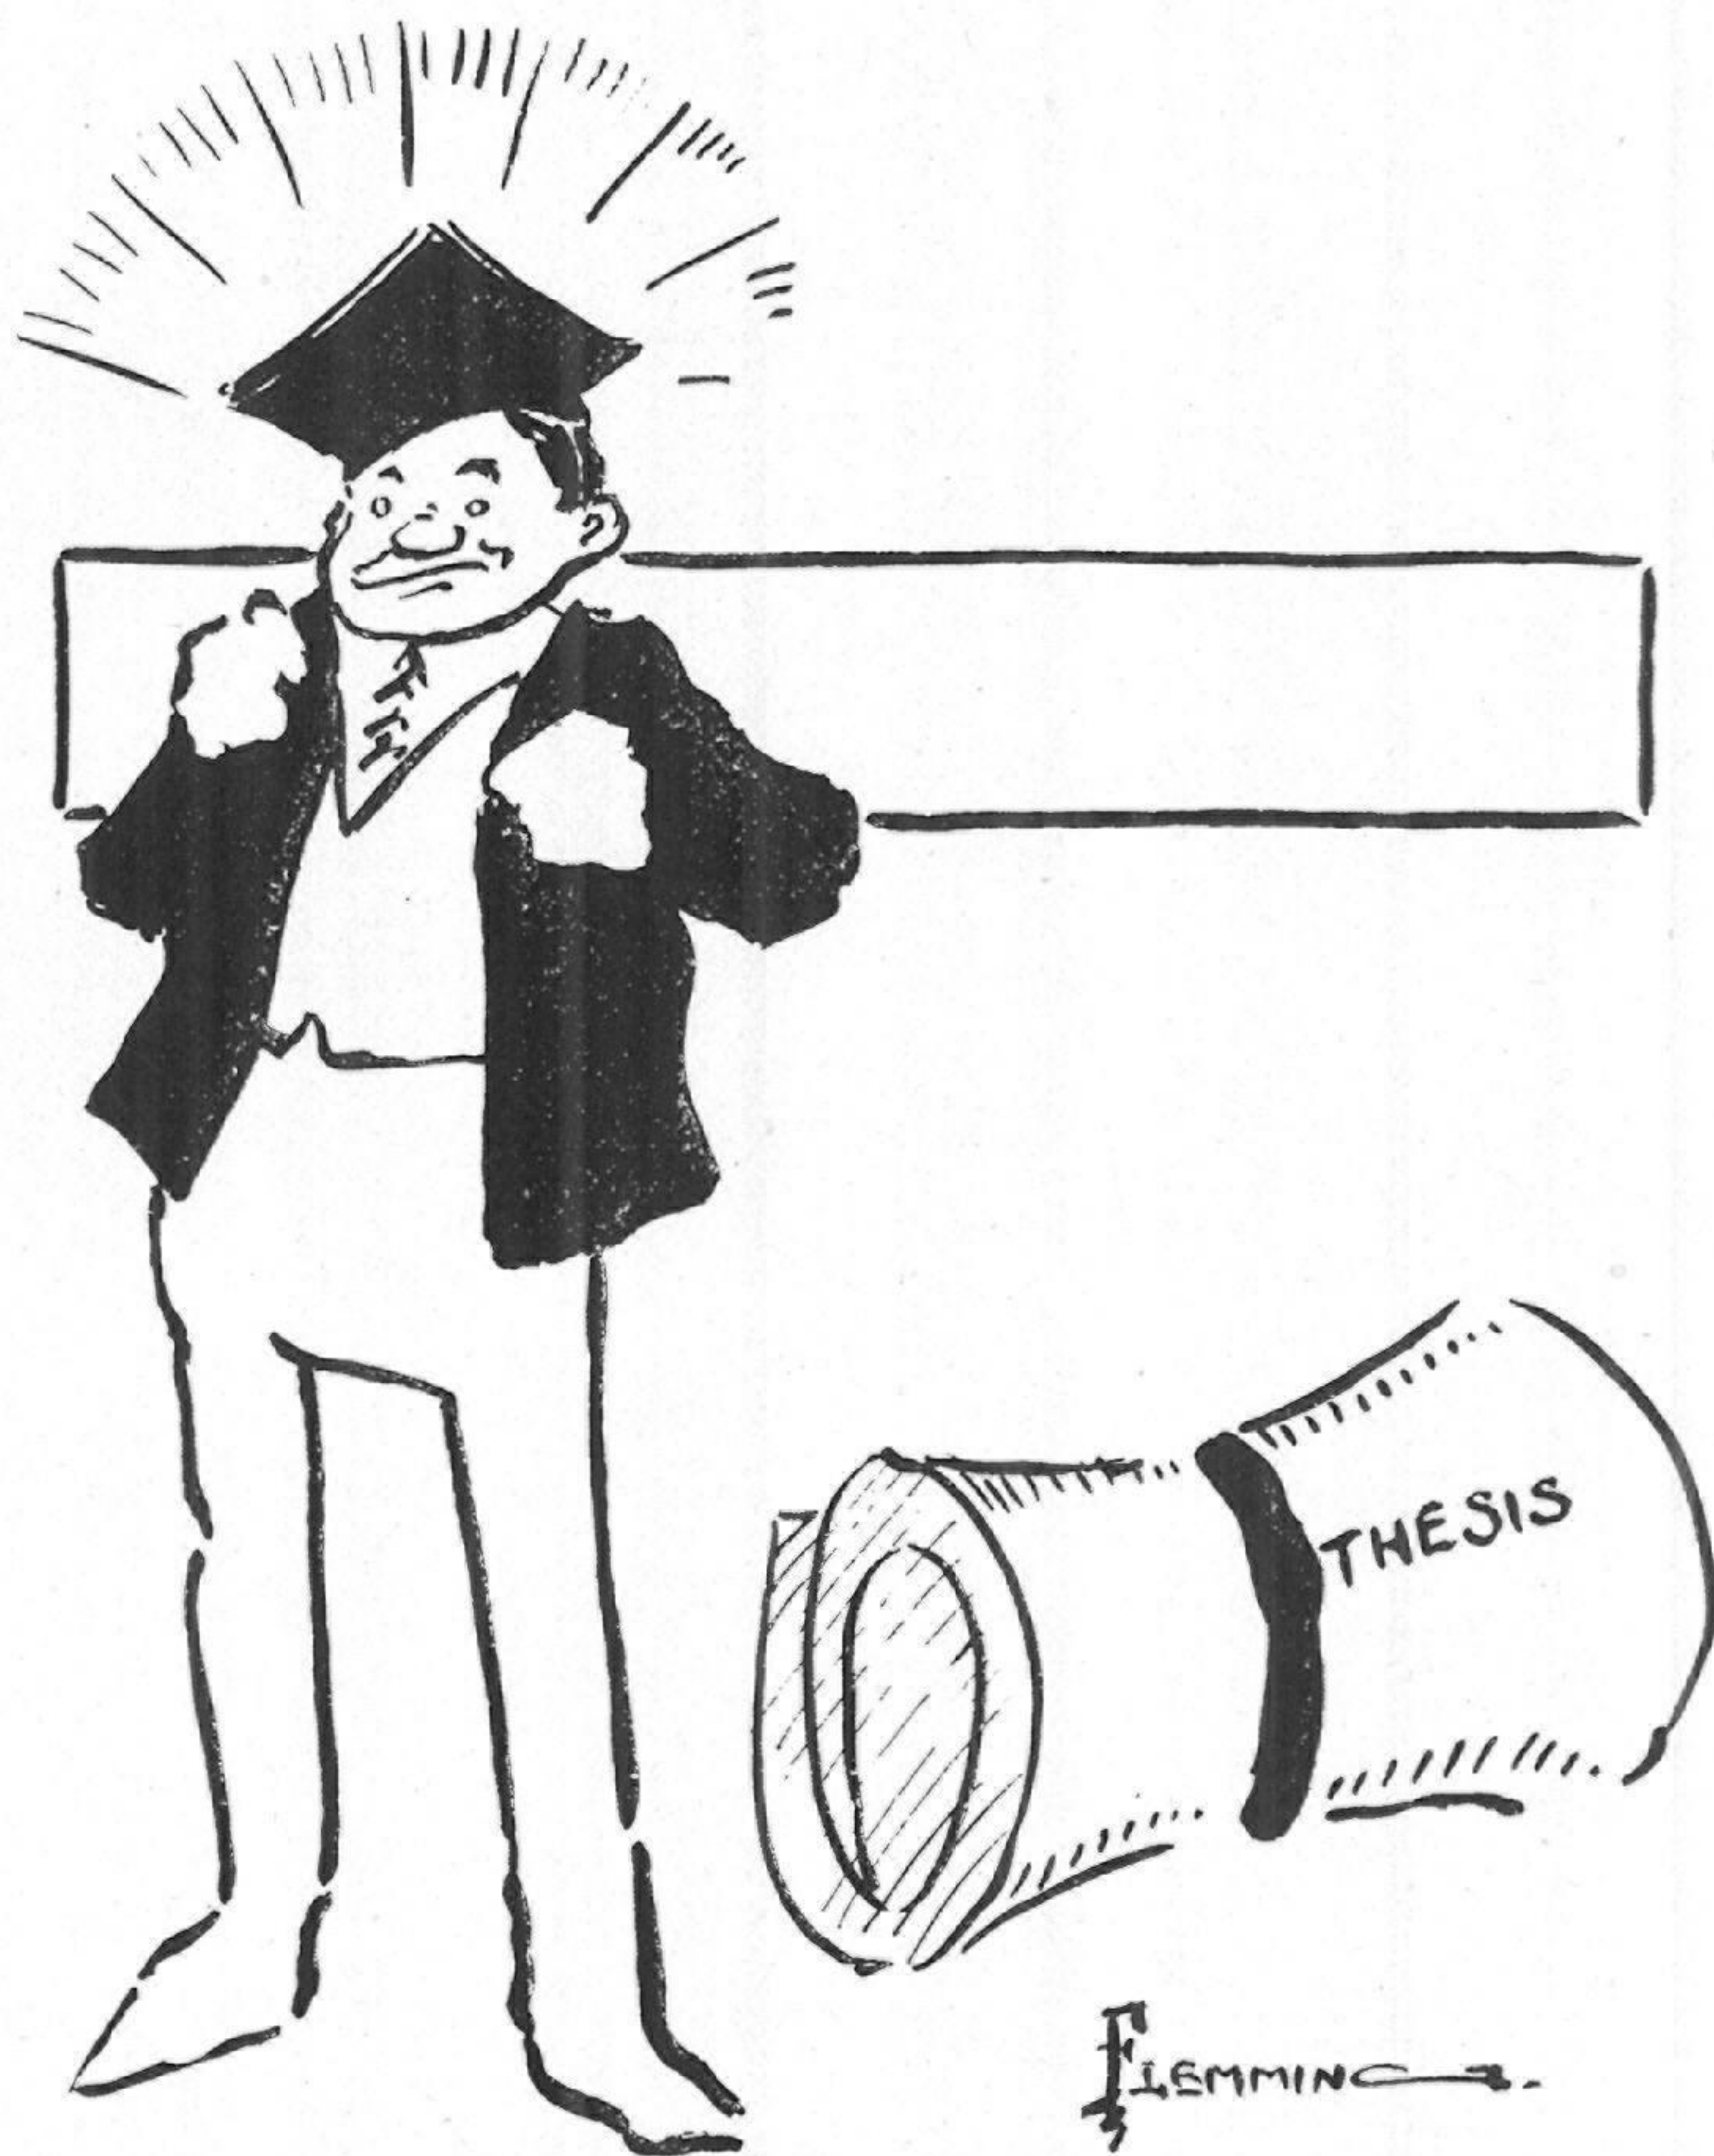

Commune, my soul, with eagle, gem or flower;
 Commune, and search for sign or ray of light.
 Command thy strength, thy book-enlightened sight,
 Thy blade of steel, thy ev'ry aided power
 And wring from doubt this all important hour
 Thy secret held by firm and subtle might;
 Whence come thy thought of faith, or wrong and right
 What law lets man o'er lowly creatures tower?

By lonely road I found an injured child—
 In tenderness I led him to his home;
 A daughter wept for one who ne'er would come—
 In love her pain and grief were reconciled.
 The secret here from humble source beguiled;
 To serve and love neath Heaven's arching dome.

 U. of W.
 Nineteen Ten!

Senior Class History

With the close of this college year the class of Nineteen-Ten completes its University career and enters newer, more practical fields of endeavor. Progress, steady and determined, has characterized the march of Nineteen-Ten since its inception at the University, and it is no mere conjecture that progress will reward the class in after life. For the strength of the class unit lies in its splendid individual manhood and womanhood; each working in conjunction with the others to raise class spirit and accomplishments to the highest possible attainment. And such training confidently bespeaks success after college life.

Civil dissension has never ravaged the class ranks. Partisanship has always given away to cool judgment; and class elections, though usually competitive, have usually decisively resulted in favor of the right man for the right place. Proper management has cleared the class debt. It is this tranquillity and spirit of unity that has spelled success for Nineteen-Ten. Dignity, tempered their enthusiasm to a splendid sincerity, centering in the well-fare of their Alma Mater. To her interest alone was their class spirit and unity intensely directed.

In college activities, Nineteen-Ten contributed generously to all forms of varsity athletics, to dramatics, journalism, politics, music, debating and oratory, and club affairs. They elevated college dramatics from the customary farce to the sensible standard play requiring talented acting. Persistent effort raised cross-country running to a permanent place in interclass affairs, Nineteen-Ten winning the Hutchinson trophy cup in the cross-country series in November, 1909. The Nineteen-Ten Tyee set a higher standard for the college annual and by careful management on a cash basis broke the long extant financial losses of previous Tyees and more than paid for itself.

The class of Nineteen-Ten, in conjunction with the class of Nineteen-Nine, established the present system of Freshmen rules and supervised the enforcement of them. Nineteen-Ten was also instrumental in organizing the Men's Club, an all University society for the promotion of men's affairs, and secured the abolishment of the semi-barbarous Freshman-Sophomore cane rush.

In football, Nineteen-Ten gave the varsity eleven Charles C. May, Hart Willis and Broussais Beck, all of whom gave excellent account of themselves on the gridiron. May was picked by Pat McArthur for the All-Northwest team in 1909, printed in Spaulding's Year Book.

Broussais Beck, Bart Lovejoy and Hart Willis were crew men, the two former men having rowed two annual intercollegiate races; they stand excellent chances for the crew this year.

In track, Nineteen-Ten developed Cleo P. King, Lewie Williams, Will Kerr and J. B. Harrison.

SENIOR CLASS HISTORY. (Continued.)

Lloyd Black, Kenneth Durham made intercollegiate debating teams. Cleo King, Will Prater and Edgar Stanton were active in interclub debating.

In dramatics, the class was unusually strong; Joe Harrison, E. H. Palmer, Will Kerr, Jay Sigsworth, Bessie Anderson, Olive Mauermann, Josephine Bulkeley, Erna Spannagel, Verne Fitch and Helen Urquhart scoring especial success.

Nineteen-Ten had Elizabeth Mathieu, Lillian Russell, H. Rogers, C. M. Maltbie, Fred Neal, J. I. St. John and Hart Willis on the orchestra and band, thus showing the musical accomplishments of its members.

Three Seniors worked up to responsible positions in journalism. Roy Crismas acted as associate editor on the 1910 Tyee, and was assistant editor this year on the Daily, filling, previous to that time every other editorial or reportorial place on the staff. Olive Mauermann worked up from reporter last year to Womens' Editor this year. Verne Fitch began as a reporter on the Daily in his Sophomore year and rose to the editorship in his Senior year. He also edited the 1910 Tyee. Joe Harrison won literary distinction as editor for two years of the Washingtonian.

Along executive and managerial lines, Ed. J. Brown, Cleo P. King and J. W. Prater head the list. Brown served on the board of control; was president of the Junior class and is now President of the A. S. U. W. King, president of the Men's Club and of the Republican Club, successfully financed the 1910 Tyee, and managed the Senior informal, which proved so great a social success, and cleared half the class debt. The acquirement, the furnishing and the daily maintenance of the present Men's Club building was also due largely to King's management. Prater is vice-president of the A. S. U. W., and assistant manager of the cooperative bookstore.

The women, too, of Nineteen-Ten have been active. Ada Etsell took the women's championship in tennis in 1908-9, and made a place on the Senior class crew and on the varsity hockey team. Edna Ficks, Martina Henehan, Ethel Latham, Josephine Bulkeley, Irene Patten, Margaret Whittle, Nell Iffland and Florence Curtis were also active in athletics.

Carrie Cowgill is the leading force in the Y. W. C. A. work and women's organization. Grace King, Minnie Le Sourd and Erna Spannagel, Bessie Anderson and Irene Patten took untiring interest and activity in class and University affairs.

Nineteen-Ten is leaving Washington. It is pleased to have been a useful force in the development of the institution. It has always been progressive and constructive; not fitfully but steadily, promoting the best interests of the University. As Alumni, it is safe to predict that Nineteen-Ten's graduates will still cherish those interests, still watch the growth of the college, and reverently honor and respect the University of Washington—their dear old Alma Mater.

U. of W.! Hi! Hi! Hi!

Junior Class History

Rapidly, with ever advancing footsteps, we of the class of 1911 near the end of that grandest period of a college life—the Junior Year; a year mingling responsibility and happiness, freedom and duty. Proudly have we worn that robe of dignity which every underclassman longs to assume, and upon which no senior can look without regret. New hopes, new resolves, new aspirations have been ours! The goal for which we have been striving is now in sight; freed from encircling mists, it gleams in a golden glow, and our dearest wish is that its attainment may be accompanied by as much pleasure and success as have the past three years.

With over four hundred eager and enthusiastic Freshies, our class of 1911 began its college career. Straightway were torn down the inane “procs” of those Sophomores, and in their place the Freshmen “procs” flauntingly reposed. Next followed our victory in the Freshmen-Sophomore tie-up. The morning after this momentous event the surprised campus saw itself strewn with the bound forms of the once lusty Sophs, now meekly begging for release and promising to be good. Our undeserved defeat at the cane rush and interclass football game but spurred us onward to later laurels. Undaunted, we pushed on to victory in both cross-country and the interclass meets, scoring more points in the latter than the three other classes combined.

The Freshman class of 1911 pulled off one of the cleverest tricks ever recorded in University annals. The entire college had gathered for assembly in the old gymnasium, President Kane had risen to speak; when slowly, from a canoe overhead, a 1911 banner mysteriously unfurled itself. A gasp of astonishment swept over the throng! Had magic entered the doors of the staid old "U?" Triumphantly, flauntingly, the symbol waved throughout the President's address. Then suddenly as the speech ceased and the chagrined Sophs stupidly gazed, two gleeful Freshy heads peeped over the side of the canoe. With a yell, the banner was waved, rolled up, tossed out a window, caught by another Freshman, and carried away to safety. And the Sophs kept on gazing!

The Sophomore year was distinguished by victories in the cane rush, class track meet and crew race. The University is still laughing at the baby picture we took of the Freshman class, and at the ridiculous outcome of their plans to bury our class in effigy. The class of 1911 also turned its attention to social affairs. Ours had been the last Freshman class which the faculty had deemed worthy of attending all college functions and verifying their high opinion of our social capabilities, we produced a Freshman picnic, a Sophomore Glee, and a Sophomore picnic, which were the essence of good fun and cleverness.

The honors which have come to the class of 1911 are many and varied. Among her W men are Mattson and Grimm in football; Hugh Bowman, Frank Coyle, Claire Bowman, in track; Ellis, Stewart, Clementson, Clarke, Huddle and Rihl, in baseball; Wyckoff, Mohr and Catlin in crew.

Not only in athletics has the class of 1911 displayed her talents. Her powers of oratory have been eloquently upheld by Roudebush and Hoover; her dramatic skill portrayed in her succesful Sophomore plays; her journalistic tendencies shown by Roy Pinkerton. Her plans were early made for publishing the best Tyee ever issued at the University, and the production of the best Junior play ever staged.

Throughout the history of the class of 1911, talent, energy, and perseverance have united to make this class the superior of all. With no feeling of misgiving or disappointment do we look back upon the past! Responsibility has been ours and gloriously have we borne it; responsibility will again be ours, and there will be no shirking. But with pride and love and reverence, we will work and work and win, for the glory of The Fairest College of Them All—the Greater Washington.

Sophomore Class History

Two years of our University life are coming to a close and our record speaks for itself—not only speaks, but fairly shouts from the housetops. We have the “start something” habit in its most virulent form and have introduced more innovations than any class in the history of the University.

But to start at the beginning: We had the largest class ever registered and Ten Million besides that, (he was later known as the “slugging kid” on the baseball team.) We were all tagged with the little green cap and were told forcibly to wear it, and wear it we did—madly, sadly, and at last gladly—for it meant a great deal to us.

After getting well organized, there was a rush on the various activities and in these our strength showed to advantage. Many positions on the Wave fell to the aspiring journalists from our class, while on the championship football team we had six first team men including the captain-elect, and on the championship baseball team we secured five positions including captain-elect for the following year. Basketball used three men, track five men, while championship tennis was composed of 1912 men. Much promising material was developed on the boys' crew and cross country team, while the girl's crew and hockey team won first place in the interclass contests. One member was successful in winning his debating W in his first year at college, while many others were particularly active in club debates, music and amateur dramatics.

In our sophomore year our interest in activities increased, the captain and five other W men on the football team came from our class; basketball used four; three men made intercollegiate debating teams and other members filled positions on the Daily such as news editor, circulating manager, city editor, staff photographer and cartoonist.

In society we have given our prescribed number of affairs, the first a big dance in the gymnasium, the second a picnic at Meydenbauer Bay, and this year a fine dance was given in the Washington State building. And now comes the records of our class fights and in this line we shine with a lustre all our own. The first year in college we wrote our proclamations as rabidly and pasted as rapidly as did the class of 1911, and to show that there was no hard feeling we tied Mr. Angevine and Mr. Woodin, prominent members of the aforementioned class in a chicken coop. That whetted our appetites for tie-ups, so that when the annual interclass tie-up came off about 4:00 P. X., one morning we tied the whole bunch up and left them decorating various sections of the campus landscape. In the last cane rush we lost by two hands. Later on, to start something we secured a pole cat, that had outlived its usefulness in this sad world of ours, and buried it under a weeping willow tree—buried it with gentleness born of a great sympathy and understanding, for was it not interred with a 1911 flag around its little form? Then turning from the last sad rites we indulged in the loveliest bang up rough house with the 1911 class that there was to be had, and twenty minutes later emerged victorious. The interclass football game was a tie—0-0.

This year we claim to have the classiest classical class yell on the campus; we have adopted a suitable hat, pasted our procs, initiated various freshmen into the ancient benighted order of Water Babies (via Lake Union,) buried our class flag successfully, escaped military drill, and to start a "new tradition" tied the freshmen up in the interclass tie-up. The Oval Club trophy bears the numerals of the 1912 for our victory in football over the freshmen class by a score of 5-0.

* * * * *

Such is our record, one that will go thundering down the ages a model for years to come and a pleasure for every member of the class of 1912 to contemplate.

Freshmen Class History

Answering from far and near the call of the "Greater Washington," the class of 1913 has given to the campus more of an emerald hue than ever before. Beginning our work late, we were more anxious to see the Alaska-Youkon-Pacific Exposition and lay a foundation for future careers than to wage combat with the Sophs, which class could, and can, be annihilated when only matters of minor occupy our minds.

Former classes, notably among them the present Sophomore class, have openly boasted of breaking rules and shattering traditions, and then later on have vainly tried to make amends. Not so with the Freshmen. We have respect for Washington's traditions, and have steadfastly resolved to live up to, and help perpetuate them.

In the annual Sophomore-Freshman tie-up, the battered and lamed men evidenced the bitterness with which it was fought. The tug of war resulted in a victory for us, and though in the flag rush the big-footed Sophomores obliterated all traces of the hidden box, right loyally did we battle for what was practically a minus quantity. On a snow-covered gridiron, near the end of a gruelling game the Sophomores won by a lone touchdown. Later in the game a Freshman back dashed through a broken field for a touchdown, only to be recalled by a Sophomore referee. Let it be known that a man of the class of 1913 distanced the representatives of the Senior, Junior and Sophomore classes and won the annual interclass cross-country race. Incidentally, we are the first class to photograph successfully the entire Sophomore class, ears and all upon four by five film.

FRESHMEN CLASS HISTORY (Concluded)

On Washington's championship eleven of 1909 were three Freshmen, one a bulwark in the line, and the other two, lineplungers of the caliber that make championships possible. Several Freshmen were numbered among the substitutes who helped to make the 'Varsity what it was. The basketball, baseball, track and rowing seasons are yet to come, but evidence is not found wanting to show that the Freshmen will do their part.

Not until the evening of December 17th in the Washington State building, where we laid dull care aside, and froliced as only Freshmen can, did we realize why the upperclassmen had gazed upon us with such longing eyes.

Along literary lines, and this in the after years is what will count, we have been very active. Monthly reminders from the Registrar's office have rarely disturbed us. We are prominent in dramatics and also in debating, having an alternate on the team which is to meet Idaho. It is significant that thirteen of the forty-one members of the Daily staff are Freshmen.

The year is but half spent, and under the influence of Washington's beautiful spring weather, more epoch making history will doubtless be chronicled by the class of 1913.

FLEMING

Gilmore Dobie has coached Washington's football team for two years. He came when the squad was demoralized after the disastrous season of 1907, and from confusion gradually built a smooth working machine, which won the Northwest Championship. In his second year the team showed to even better advantage, and Washington remained the undefeated champion. This wonderful success can be attributed to but one person—the peerless coach—whose indomitable will and fighting spirit have put the Purple and Gold at the top of the football ladder.

Football Season of 1909

BY COACH GILMORE DOBIE.

MUCKLESTONE
(CAPT.)

The football season of 1909 was a most strenuous one and at the same time one of the most successful in the history of the institution. The team easily won all of its games on the schedule, the attendance showed a marked increase, and more interest than ever was manifested by the student body and the general public. The increased element of success was undoubtedly very largely due to the winning ability of the team. The winning, however, should not be attributed to any one cause alone, but to many. The most important of these factors was the hard and conscientious work of the players and coaches, a patriotic student body, the untiring efforts of an able and conscientious manager and the able assistance of Doctor Hall, who presided over the physical welfare of the men.

Although successful, the season was not without its hardships. To begin with, the team was confronted with an obstacle of no small proportions in the fact that the college did not open until the very late date of October 4, a feature which could give all opponents a handicap of two weeks or more for preparation.

This handicap was curtailed somewhat by the institution of preliminary practice beginning on September 20. The plan was ideal and would have completely removed the objection to the late opening had it not been that a number of the candidates could not for financial reasons leave their summer work for football practice alone. Again, Washington had lost by graduation and other causes five players of the year previous, Bantz, the left tackle; Jarvis, left guard; Babcock, right guard, and Westover and Willis, from the back field, all players of sterling quality and whose positions it was so easy matter to fill. But the left tackle position was well cared for by the return of Huber Grimm. Griffiths, the sterling Freshman, equaled his predecessor at left guard, and May lived up to his past reputa-

The first game took place on October 2, on Denny Field, with the marine team from the battleship Milwaukee and resulted in a victory for Washington, 52-0. The following Saturday, October 9, in two fifteen-minute halves the Queen Anne High School was taken into camp, 34-0. On October 23 Lincoln High was defeated in two short halves, 20-0. This ended the preliminary games, and the season was on in earnest. The team journeyed to Spokane for the first important game of the year with the University of Idaho, on October 30. This was a game of unusual interest, as it marked the first appearance of the Washington team in the eastern empire city, and it also must show to some extent the strength of the Washington team, which up to that time was very much of an uncertainty, at least to the outside world. The game proved a landslide for Washington. Not only was the Idaho team completely outplayed in every department, but the overwhelming victory of 50 to 0 registered the highest score ever piled up in the northwest by one conference team against another. The Whitman College team came to Seattle for the annual game with Washington October 6. Whitman put up her usual plucky and hard-fought game, holding Washington to a 17-0 score, but was unable to make much of an impression against the Washington defense.

Next in order was the game with the Oregon Agricultural College, played in Corvallis, November 13. This was a game of grave uncertainty. The farmers were undefeated, having met such teams as Willamette and Whitman and each time easily emerged with an handsome victory. Not only had they proved to be a dangerous opponent, but the extremely muddy condition of the field made the new style of game impossible, and naturally decreased Washington's chances for victory. The Washington team proved to be the best mud-horses and in two 25-minute halves pulled out a victory of 18-0. The final game of the year was played in Seattle on Thanksgiving Day, with the University of Oregon. Perhaps no other game in the annals of northwest football created a greater interest. Oregon, somewhat humiliated by Washington's decisive victory of the year previous, came to Seattle with a string of unbroken victories over the other colleges, determined to wipe out the defeat of the year before and crown herself champion of the northwest. This seemed by no means an impossible task, for Oregon was admitted to have the heaviest, fastest and best-drilled team in her history. Furthermore, she had on her team a punter in Clark of exceptional ability. But Washington was equally as determined. Her punter, Max Eakins, was greater than Clark. The game was hard fought and keenly contested throughout. In rushing the ball by old-fashioned football the teams were about equally matched, but Washington's superb defense, her superiority in forward passing and in punting proved the undoing of Oregon. The game resulted in a victory for Washington by a score of 20-0, giving Washington the championship for the second successive time.

SPARGER

Baseball

BY DODE BRINKER

Last spring, for the second time during the ten years Washington has been playing inter-college baseball, a nine representing this institution won the championship of the Northwest.

Without doubt the team of 1909 was the best aggregation of baseball players that ever wore the uniform of this university. The call for candidates sent out early last spring brought forth such a number of naturally brilliant fielders and hitters that it was at once apparent the difficulty was not to find good players, but to pick the best from such a gratifying array of talent.

The team played 31 games in all, winning 23 and losing 8. The games played included a series with the Seattle Club of the Northwestern League, in which the Varsity won two games, and lost the others by close scores.

Early in May Washington met Whitman in a series of three games played on the campus. The Missionaries had previously beaten the University of Oregon, and with unbounded faith in the puzzling powers of the good right arm of their star pitcher, Borleske, engaged Washington hopefully. The football star and his assistants did yoeman service, but Captain Brown and his braves were not to be denied, and by vicious slugging won three easy victories.

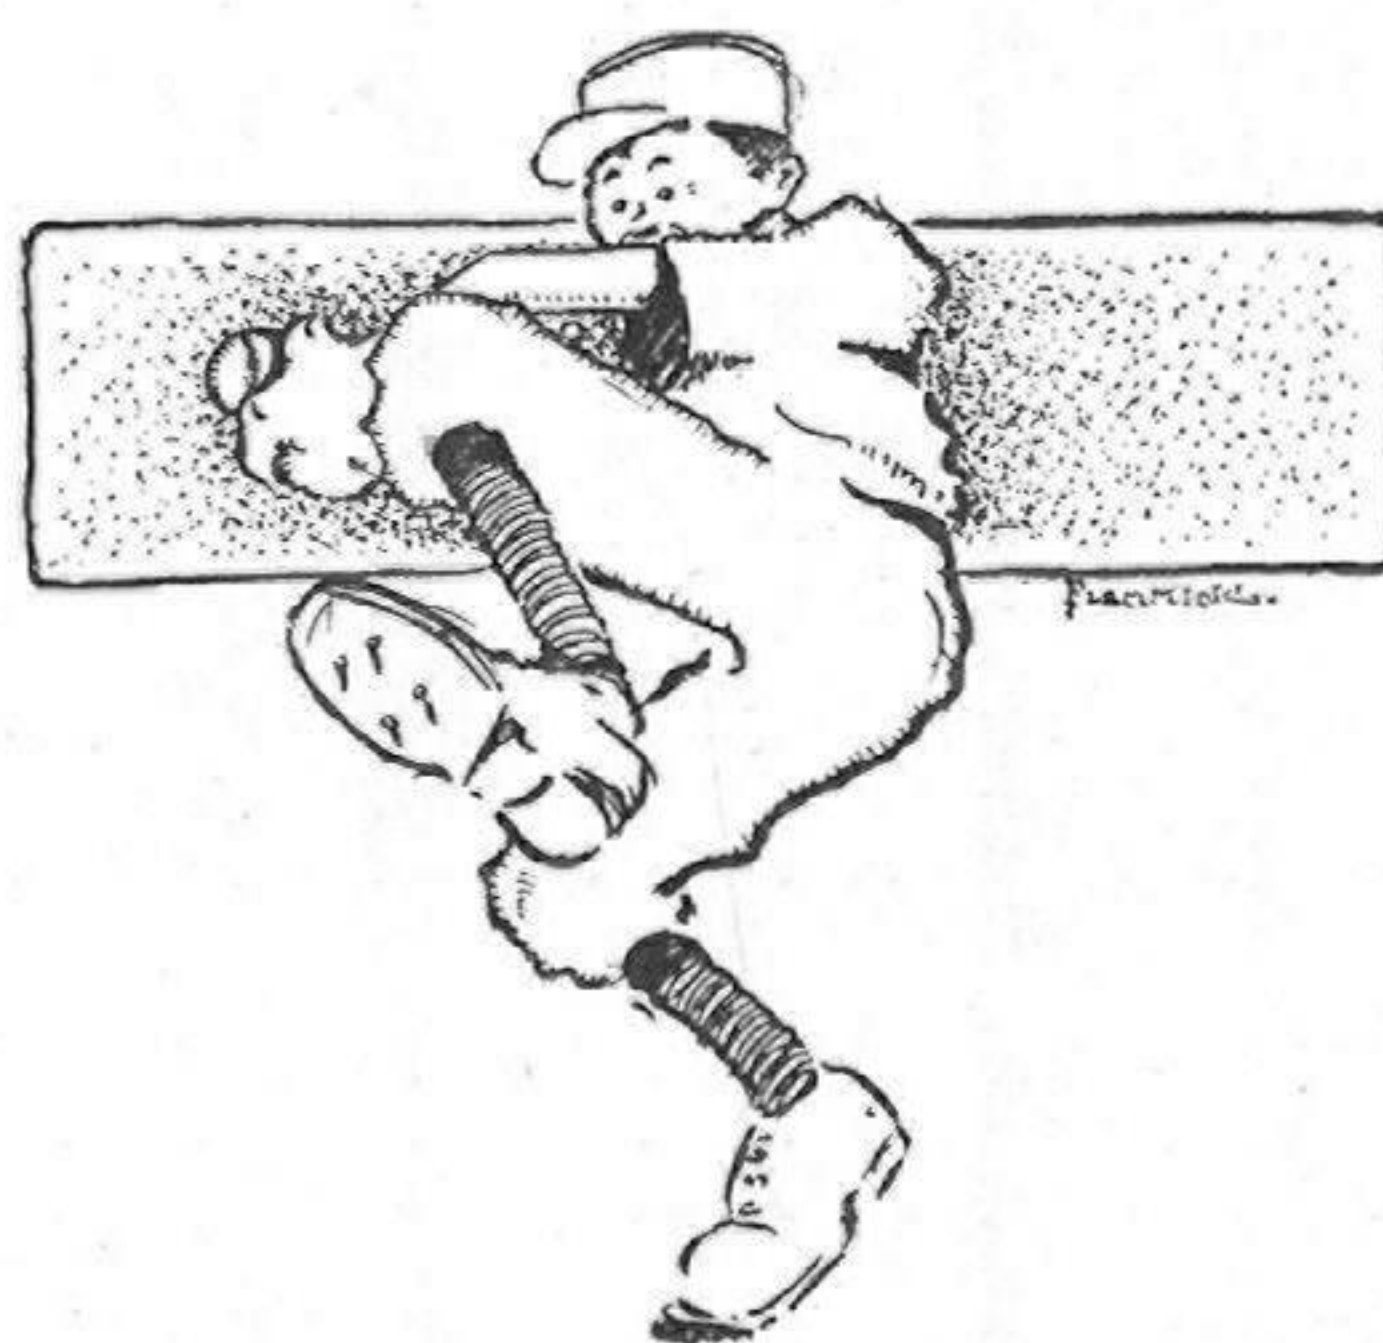

BASEBALL (Concluded)

Next came the Washington State College. She not only had defeated Oregon, but Whitman as well, and on the outcome of this series of six games depended the championship of the Northwest.

Rendered over-confident by the easy victories won from Whitman, Washington played in an extremely loose and disorganized manner in the first two games, and was defeated. However, these set-backs showed how imminent was the possibility of losing the championship, so the defenders of the Purple and Gold applied themselves with great earnestness and zeal in the remaining four games, and, by working that willing and dependable young pitcher, James Clark, somewhat overtime, won all four contests and the championship.

The prospects for another championship team this year are fully as bright as they were last spring. The Varsity loses the services of Charley Mullen, captain-elect and one of the best first basemen ever seen in the Northwest, who has gone to join the White Sox, but the Freshman class has brought into college a wealth of seasoned baseball timber, so the hole made by Mullen's defection will no doubt be satisfactorily patched up.

James Clark, probably the cleverest pitcher the Varsity ever had, and who would pitch his arm off to win a game for Washington, was chosen to lead the team this spring in the place of Mullen.

CREW

EVERETT VOORHEES THOMPSON.

Born at Dayton, Washington, 23 August, 1885
Died at Juliaetta, Idaho, March 30, 1910.

Everett Thompson was quiet, gentle and modest; he was also earnest, sincere and efficient. His life reflected the truth of the old saying: "It is as much a part of the integrity of a man's character that he permit no wrong to be done him as that he do no wrong." His cheery, helpful spirit won him cordial welcome. His prompt attention to duties imposed drew him into many activities. This was well illustrated by his attitude toward Campus Day. "When I graduate," said he, "I will try to shape my work so I can come back to the University on each Campus Day as long as I live." This clean and wholesome boy, cut off from life at the threshold of a promising manhood, has left us the precious memory of one who unconsciously, naturally, and constantly obeyed the rule: "Thy neighbor as thyself."

The 1909 Season

BY COACH CONIBEAR.

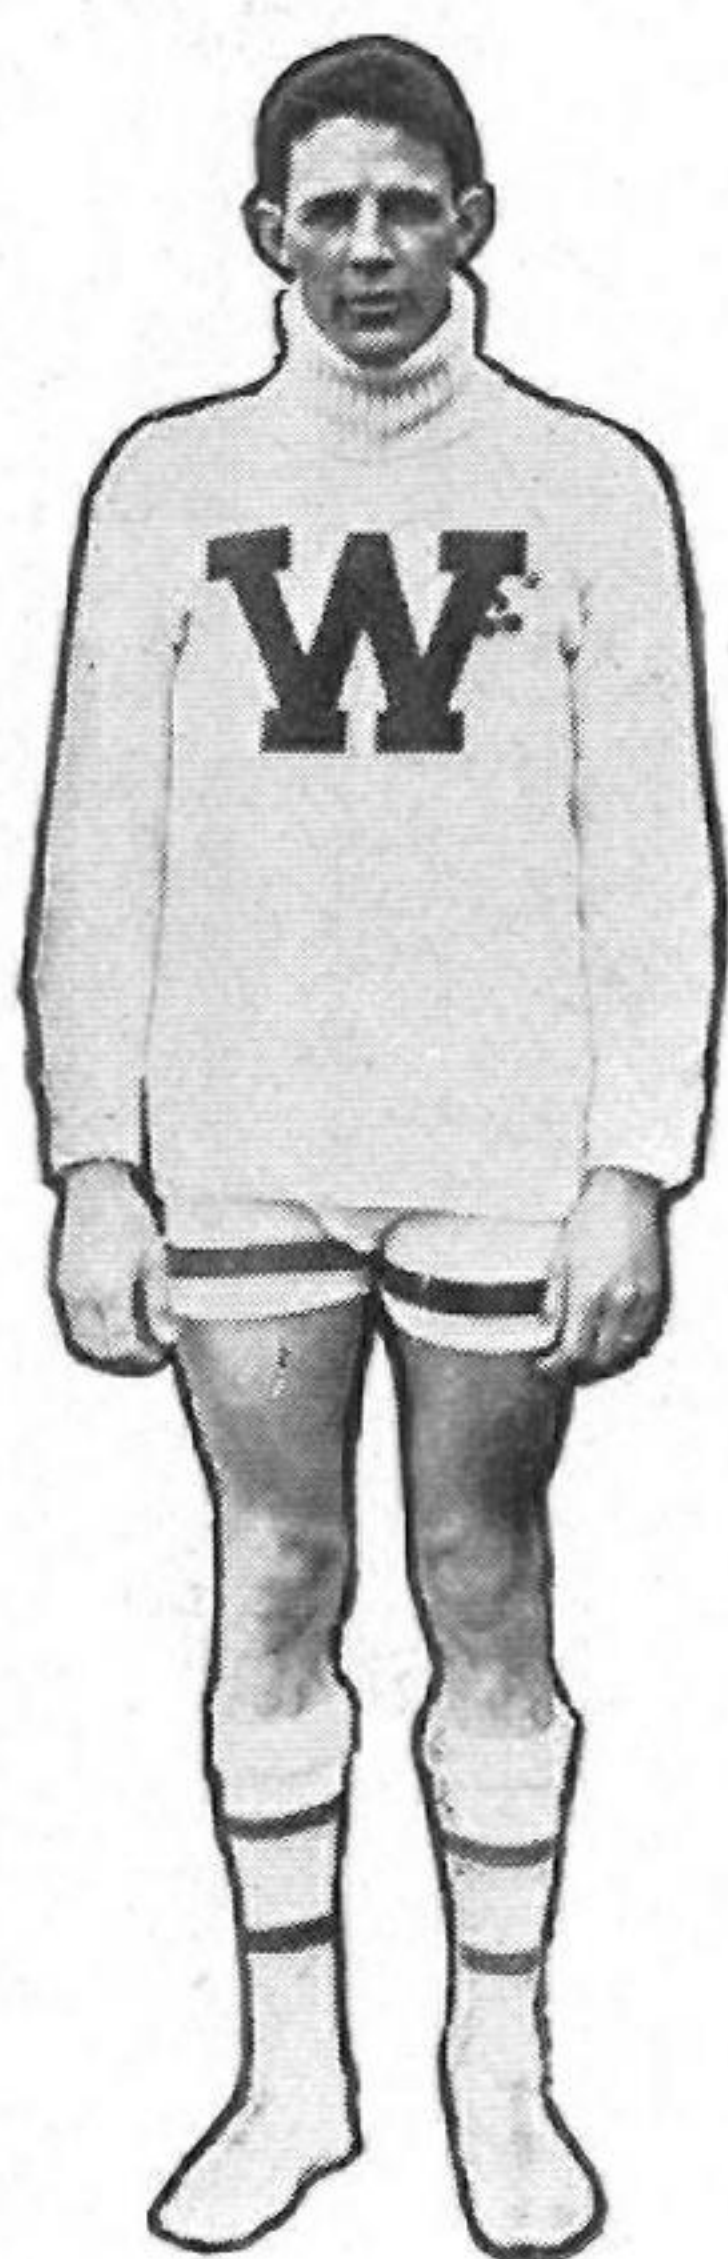

Last year was a rather unfortunate year for rowing for several reasons. The first was that enough men had not been developed the year previous to make competition keen for seats in the "Varsity" boat. This I hope to remedy by having a better class of men competeing in the intercollege, interclass and interclub races this year.

We all had high hopes at the close of the 1908 season for another championship crew for 1909, but when we lost such good, strong oarsmen as Kirby, Lowry and Willis, all at one time, we had a hard task to fill their seats. The 1909 crew, while they had nice slide work and body movement, they did not have the strength to fight wind and rough water or stand much cold weather.

With the new boats that are now being built, and the new quarters, all of which have been made possible by the generous donations of our friends in the city, a greater number of students than ever before should be out rowing, and as a result better oarsmen should be developed, consequently better crews. I expect this year will see the heaviest crew that has ever represented Washington at the start of the race with Stanford and California. Our new boats will be wider, deeper and shorter than the old ones and as a result will support a heavier crew. And the boats will set more on the water instead of in the water.

The girl's rowing has grown from a class of five in '06 to thirty in '08, and seventy in '09, to over eighty, and as a result Miss O'Donnell has been made assistant rowing coach. Last year saw the first form contest for women's rowing which together with the class race completed the program, but at the close of the season two clubs were formed and this year will see this event added.

Beginning of Rowing at the University

BY F. E. BRIGHTMAN.

To E. F. Blaine, one of Seattle's best known citizens, belongs the honor of having taken the first steps to make rowing a reality at the University of Washington.

In the fall of 1899, Mr. Blaine told the writer that he would assist the students in raising money with which to purchase boats, if they were ready to take up the matter. At a meeting of the student body the next day, rowing was discussed and a resolution creating a committee on rowing, consisting of three members, was passed. Mr. Sterling Hill, '00, Mr. D. A. Millett, '01, and the writer, were appointed on this committee; the writer was made chairman of the committee, for the reason, probably, that the students generally, regarded the move as premature.

The action taken by the students was reported to Mr. Blaine. He started a subscription list with a good sum, and his business associate, Mr. Charles L. Denny, was the second name on the list with an equal amount. Mr. Blaine then telephoned business acquaintances of his who he knew were able to assist, and asked them to give amounts which he named. The writer acted as messenger for Mr. Blaine, to go around and get the subscribers' names on the list and bring back the money. In a short time it was apparent that enough money would be raised in this manner, to purchase two four-oared barges.

An old oarsman and boat-builder named Stone, was building boats here in Seattle at that time and he was given a contract for two barges; he did the work on these boats in a building next to the Moran Company's Ship Yard, on the South Side.

Practically all of the money raised by this subscription was used in the building of the boats.

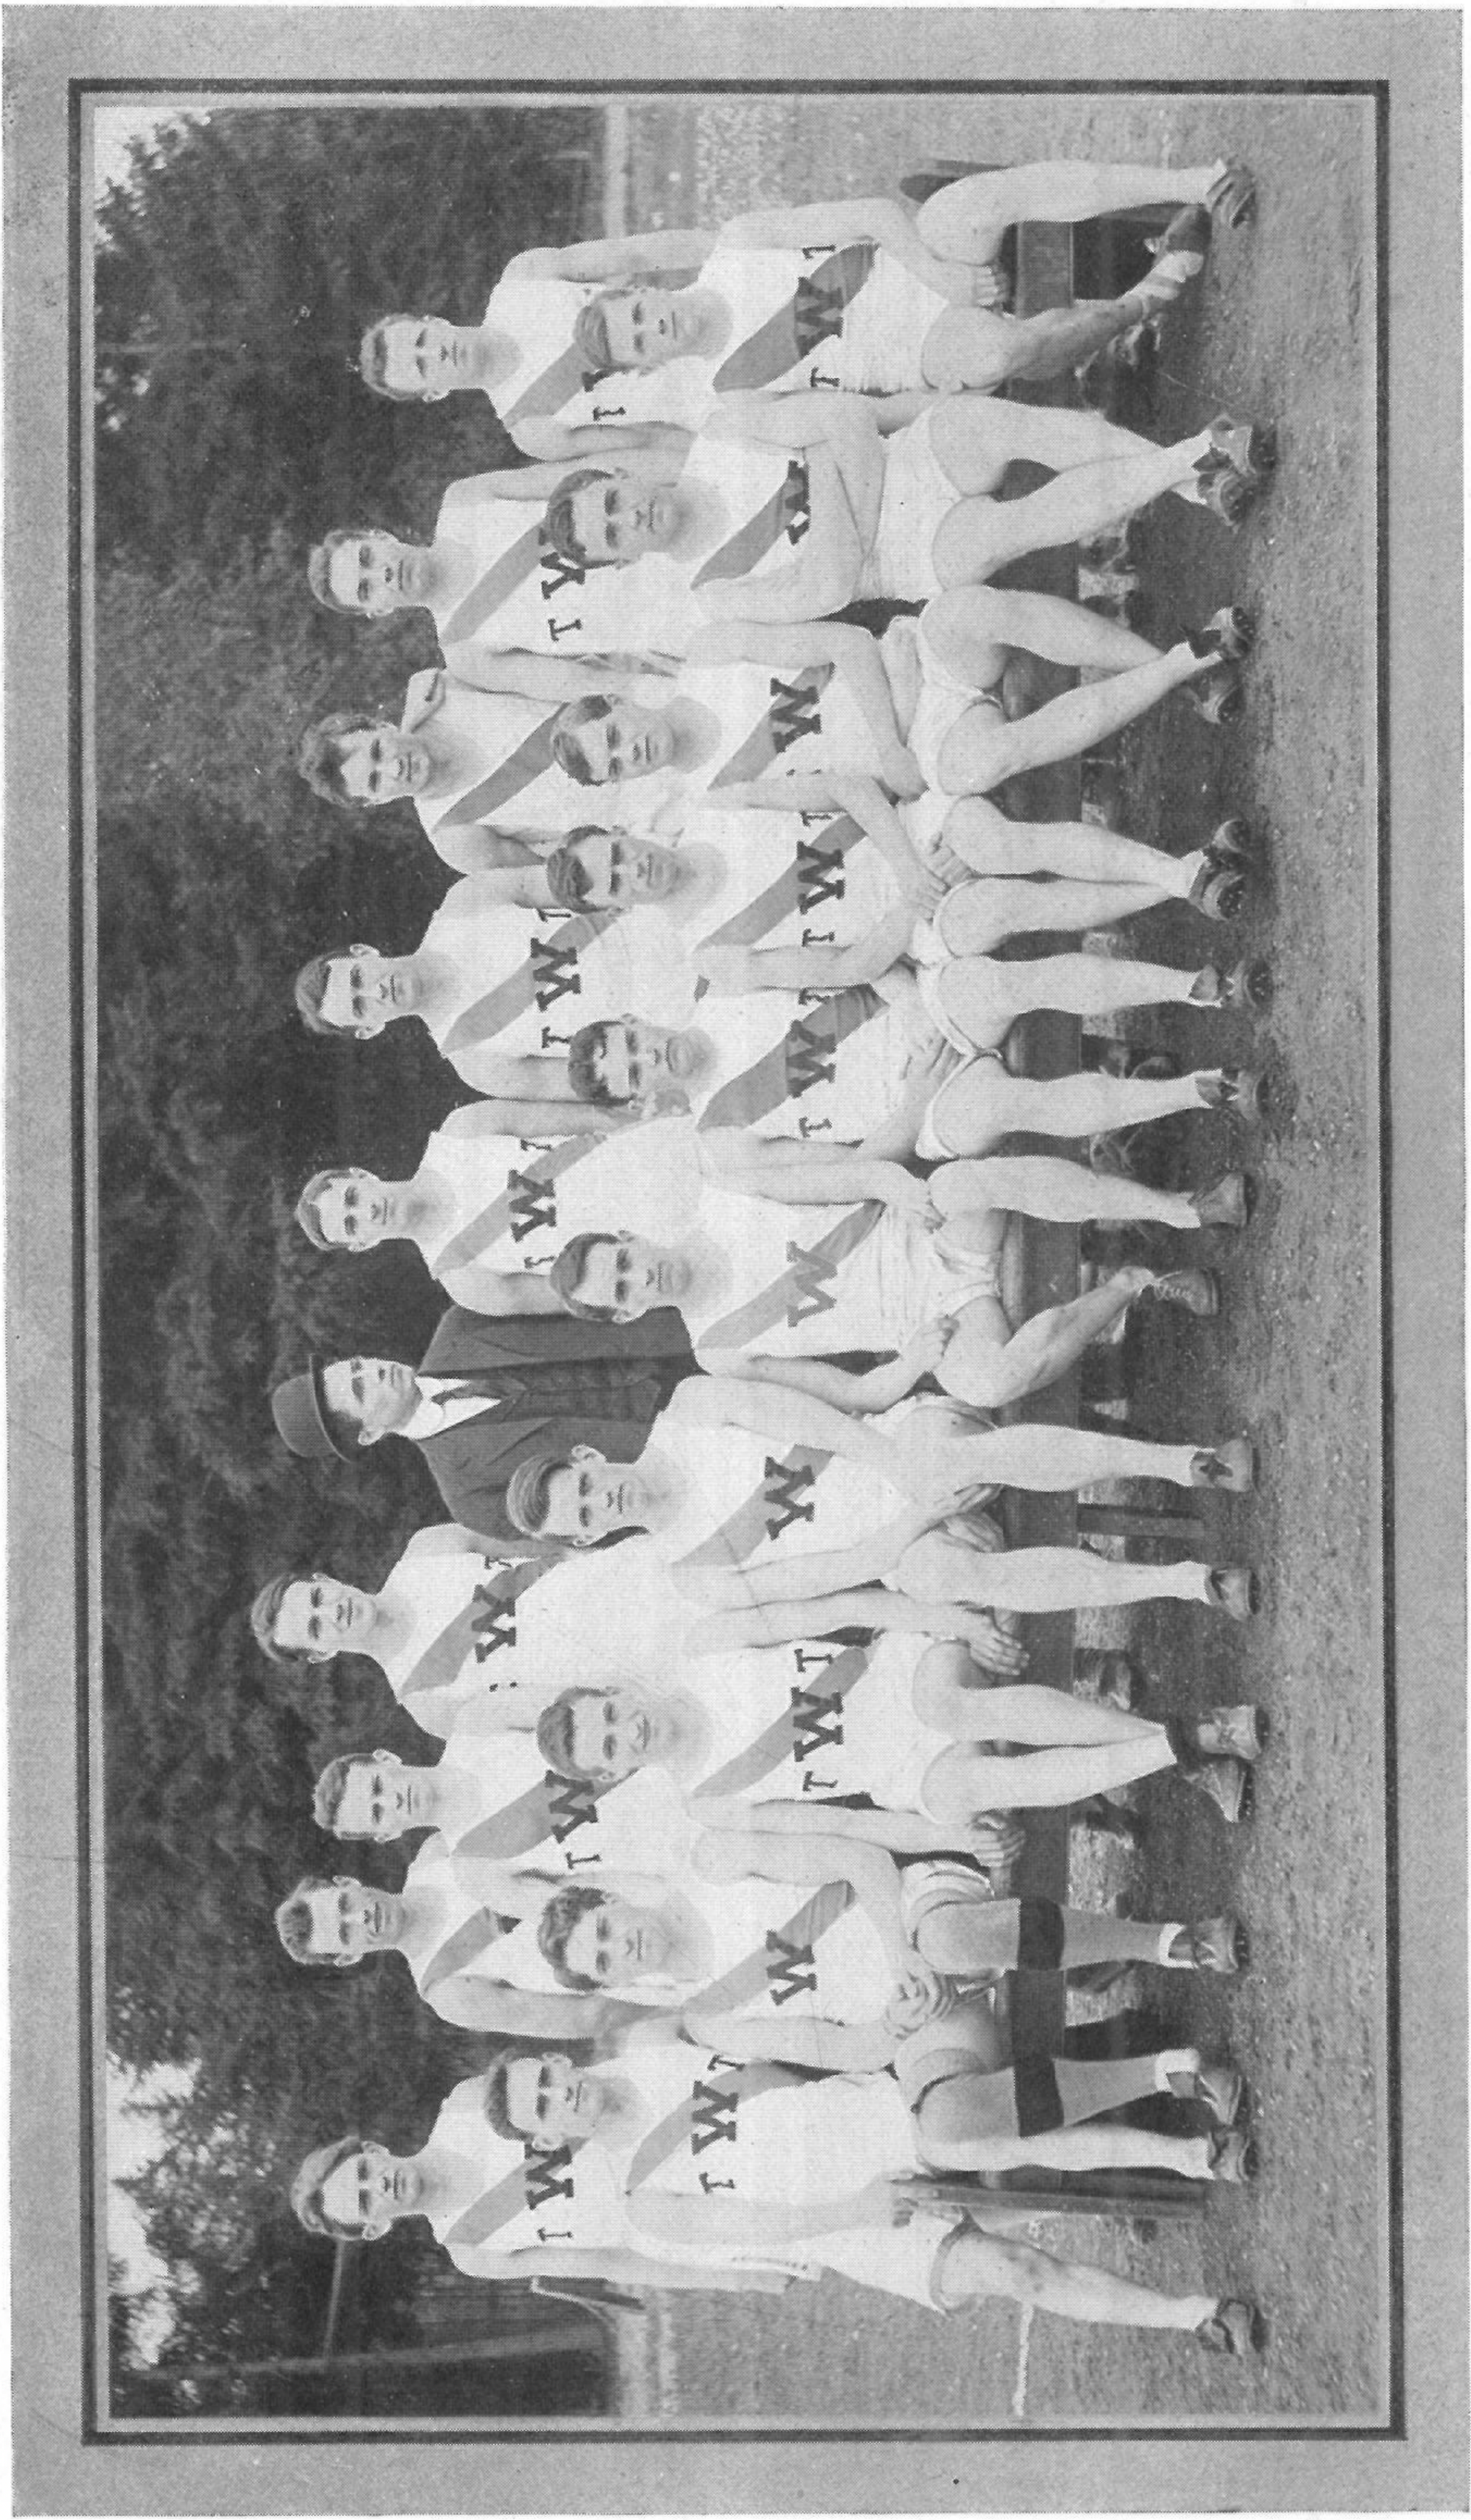

The question then arose: "Where would the boats be housed when they were completed?" Mr. Blaine again came to our assistance with the suggestion that the students do as much as possible towards providing labor and material for a boathouse and that we would get further subscriptions to pay for the work which it was necessary to get others to do. At Mr. Blaine's solicitation, someone gave the timber out of which to build the float; another contributed the services of some teams to put the logs into the water. The students organized a Logging Bee, and one day in the spring of 1900, cut the logs for the float, put them into Union Bay and rafted them over to the site where the boathouse was located for the next nine years thereafter.

On the day of the Logging Bee, Mr. and Mrs. Blaine provided a bounteous dinner at their home on the shore of Lake Washington, near Madison Park, for the loggers.

Track Athletics in the University

BY D. C. HALL.

The history of track athletics in the University of Washington, as nearly as may be determined by the present generation, is anything but pleasant. From the very nature of the sport it is exacting in its demands upon the participants, and has connected with it the fewest number of pleasurable incidents. As a consequence men are loath to undertake track work excepting as a matter of pure duty. It is not a money making sport, nor is it expensive. Thus it is allowed to exist and carry itself along with its own momentum. At all other coast institutions it receives enthusiastic support, and in connection with other athletic activities it is successful. In other words, an organization gets from a sport just what it puts into it and nothing more. Defeat is the best incentive to victory. This is felt by those who are responsible for our sports, and if indications are at all reliable we should have a team this year superior to any team of the past. That does not necessarily mean we shall be victorious in all meets. The other fellow may be stronger, if he is not, we will win. The University track team should become harder to defeat each succeeding year.

BASKETBALL SQUAD

Basketball Season 1909-1910

BY MANAGER ST. JOHN

At the University of Washington a new era in basketball was begun with the present season. The board of control, recognizing the ability of the team and the popularity of the game, has at last decided to reinstate the fascinating winter sport. This year the team was managed by the members themselves independently of the A. S. U. W. Next year the game will be established as a major college sport, and the team will be entered into the Northwest Conference.

The season was begun with the understanding that should the sport prove successful, both financially and in the results of the game, it would be recognized, and the players hereafter awarded W's. The conditions were more than met; the team finished the season of hard contests with an enviable record, having won fourteen out of nineteen games played—all but two of these games being played away from the home floor. All the strongest teams in the Northwest were met, including athletic clubs, Y. M. C. A.'s and colleges. Washington, not being in the Northwestern college league, could not compete for the intercollegiate championship. However, they met and defeated W. S. C., the acknowledged winners of the championship title, on the latter's own floor; this game being the only one lost by the State college throughout the season.

Two extended trips were made by the team; one into Eastern Washington and Idaho, the other into Oregon. Each was successful both financially and from a standpoint of victories. Eight men made these trips: Captain Clementson, Manager St. John, Cook, Williams, Tupper, Keeler, Rabel and Sugg.

At the close of the season the board of control voted W sweaters to be given hereafter to men who play in half the intercollegiate halves. Those who meet the requirements this year are: Clementson, Keeler, Rabel, Cook, Williams, and St. John.

The second woman's tournament was held in May, 1909. Miss Marie Williams, '11, won the all-university championship. In a hard fought game she defeated Ada Etsell, '10, the 1908 champion. Miss Etsell is now runner-up.

The Woman's Tennis Club of the University of Washington was organized May 6, 1908, with a membership of fourteen students. The limit, sixteen members, was reached in 1909. The purpose of the club is to foster an interest in tennis among the women of the University. The outcome of this interest has been two tournaments—1908 and 1909. A tournament has been planned for the latter part of May, 1910.

The Deutscher Verein is a social club open to all students taking work in the Department of German. It is designed to acquaint its members more closely with German life and thought, and to afford opportunity for the development of conversational German. Two meetings a month are held. The program consists usually of literary and musical numbers contributed by the members; sometimes special lectures are arranged; occasionally an evening is devoted to social entertainment. Each year the club stages one or two German plays.

Secretary,	--	--	--	--	--	GRACE YOUNG

The Chehalis County Club was organized November 23, 1909.

The purpose of the club is to interest graduates of the high schools of Chehalis County in the University of Washington; to procure the co-operation of the business men of the county in establishing scholarships or prizes; to obtain for Chehalis County the recognition due it, and to foster a spirit of better fellowship among the students of Chehalis County.

Membership in this club includes all students registered in the University from Chehalis County and all graduates from Chehalis County schools.

The Washington Law Association is a joint organization of all the law classes of the Law Department of the University of Washington, organized for purposes of carrying out the different activities of the law school. The Association procures numerous prominent members of the bar and bench from Seattle and the Northwest to address the entire law school upon legal topics of interest and of instructive benefit to the law students.

The Association also maintains debating relations with the University of Oregon Law School and the Victoria Law Society, and holds annual debates with these institutions. These matters are all conducted under the auspices of the Association and the Association presents the members of its debating teams with gold emblems in recognition of their efforts in its behalf.

The Victoria Law Society at its annual 1910 banquet invited a delegate from the Association to be present as its guest of honor, and MR. DANIEL B. COGSWELL, '10, represented the Association on that occasion.

The University of Washington Tennis association is an outgrowth of the Men's Tennis club, is a member of the Northwestern Inter-collegiate Tennis association, and holds the championship of the northwest in inter-collegiate tennis in both singles and doubles.

The inter-collegiate tournament held in Portland last year was participated in by Whitworth, O. A. C., University of Oregon and University of Washington. Welwood Murray, U. of W. won the singles and Murray and Art Moncrief, U. of W., won the doubles. Herbert Van Kuran, the third member of the team, was too ill to play.

The prizes for the club tournament were won by Ballard in singles and Ballard and Fisher in doubles. The inter-class contest fell to the freshmen, Murray, '12, winning the singles and Murray and Ballard, '12, winning the doubles.

Two high school tournaments were held; Murray and Ballard defeated Broadway High School three straight matches. Moncrief and Ballard defeated Lincoln High School three straight matches.

Men interested in tennis are hoping and working for the coveted "W" for tennis. After the brilliant success of a year ago and considering the fact that tennis is supporting itself and not costing the A. S. U. W. any money, it is thought that maybe the board of control will grant the inter-collegiate team the much desired emblem this year.

BOYD FRENCH,	--	--	--	--	--	Vice-President
HELEN COLLIER,	--	--	--	--	--	Secretary
ZELMA REEVES,	--	--	--	--	--	Treasurer

The Chelan County Club was the first club of its kind at the University of Washington and is at present the only one giving a scholarship. Through this club the Big Red Apple Scholarship of $200.00 was established, the winner each year being the most deserving student graduating from the Wenatchee High School. The first scholarship was awarded to Fred Hamilton; the 1909-1910 scholarship was given to Ray Morrison.

The primary object of the Chelan County Club is to encourage students from that district to attend the University of Washington.

Its second object is purely social, the annual event of the club being a big apple-fest to which members of all the other state and county organizations are invited. The membership of the club is thirty-five.

Pharmacy Club

ORGANIZED 1904.

The purpose of the organization is the furtherance of Pharmaceutical knowledge and good fellowship. During each college year many prominent physicians and druggists have appeared in lectures of special interest to the students of the department.

University Book Store

PERCY DEARLE, MANAGER.

The University Book Store continues to grow. The new location in the large frame building north of Denny Hall affords sufficient room and light to handle the increasing business. The stock is to be increased to $30,000.00, or double the present amount. We are better prepared to meet the demands of a large student body than ever before. A $32,000.00 business was done this college year.

The book store is owned and controlled by the Associated Students of the University of Washington.

This club was organized in 1899, for the discussion of chemical topics by students, faculty and by prominent men outside the university.

Membership is open to all students of the department of chemistry and pharmacy above freshmen standing. At present, the membership numbers about thirty.

Its meetings are held on the first and third Thursday of every month, at which times, one or more papers are presented, followed by discussions by the club as a whole, of topics of current interest.

The club has charge of the "stunts" at "open night," which, this year, was held on April 16th, the occasion being the dedication of Bagley Hall. The club usually visits one or more industrial plants during the year, in order to familiarize its members with conditions as they are in commercial work.

LITERARY

Sunrise

RACHEL MARSHALL, '12.

(Published in the March Washingtonian.)

An incident in the life of Francois Villon done into a drama of one act.

PERSONS.

FRANCOIS VILLON,	--	--	--	--	Poet and housebreaker
TROIS ECHELLES,					{ His comrades in the next cell, all four to be hung at sunrise.
JEHAN LE LOUP,	--	--	--	--
CASIN CHOLET,
THE CHILD DAUPHIN,	--	--	--	--	--

SCENE.—A stone cell in the prison of St. Denis on the outskirts of Paris. An hour before sunrise. To RC a lamp, made of a piece of wick stuck in a bowl of grease, stands in niche in the stone wall; it flickers and throws great fantastic shadows about the cell, which is bare except for a bed made of a pile of rags at L. RL is a small window set very high, thru which is seen a bit of sky and a single large star moving slowly. Under the window a door, heavily barred and fastened with a chain and padlock. To RR another door thru which are heard the voices of the prisoners in the next cell. A door at R. Discovered, Villon sitting with sprawling ease on a wooden stool between the lamp and the door. He is reading a scroll, and is tall and lean; a keen dark face expressive of every emotion that crosses his soul, wide grey eyes, sensitive mouth and long, thin hands; his clothes are torn and stained but were once handsome, and he wears them with a courtly grace; the cloak hangs from one shoulder and his hat is cocked defiantly. His manner is at once impudent and winning; he has a melancholy grace and a princely bearing that lapses suddenly and momentarily into the slink of the thief.

SUNRISE. (Continued.)

Voices from next cell, counting.

- 1ST VOICE Three, one, two; that looks good for you, le Loup, (rattling of dice and sound of their being thrown.)
- 2D VOICE Sixes, Trois Echelles.
- 3D VOICE Nay, but one six; three and two and six, eleven.
- 2D VOICE Now, give me—
- 1ST VOICE Look at him, how he shakes.
- 2D VOICE One minute of life, le Loup, is long when you have but three. (Sound of dice being thrown.)
- 1ST VOICE Six! six! six!! You hang first, Casin Cholet.
- 2D VOICE (Terror stricken.) Nay, you jogged my elbow.
- 1ST & 3D VOICES It was fairly cast.
- 2D VOICE (Loudly.) Nay, I will not, I will not have it!
- VILLON What thing is it, Casin Cholet refuses?
- 1ST VOICE We cast dice to see who shall hang first in the morning.
- VILLON And fortune smiled on Casin Cholet?
- 3D VOICE Aye. He won all our beer last night and now he doesn't like it because he won't have to watch us go first.
- 2D VOICE Ah, God! To die, to die so soon!
- 1ST & 2D VOICES (Wailing.) No way out! No way out!
- VILLON Peace! Ye yelping dogs! Time enough to yelp at sunrise.
- 1ST VOICE Francois, Francois, can you not help us? Must we die?
- 2D VOICE Must we hang at sunrise?
- VILLON Peace! Am I Joshua to stop the sun? I would I were.
- 3D VOICE (Greasy and persuasive.) Francois, the jailer hath a daughter.
- VILLON Chattering fool, don't I know it? Keep still. I would prepare my soul.
- 3D VOICE (Mockingly.) For what? Art sure there's no way out?

VILLON

(Rising and leaning against the door.) Ye pack of blub-bering fools, listen, for the third time: There is no way out, no weak stone, no broken lock; the doors are fast—locked fast as the gates of heaven. Come, come comrades, we have lived more than most folks, 'tis fit we pay. (Sings.)

Life is a gamble and Fate holds the dice,
Calls us to show down all in a trice;
Life is a gamble and Fate holds the ace,
Sweeps up the stakes and leaves not a trace.

The game is over, mes amis, and we've lost. The candle is out. It is not so bad; pouf! . . . and it is over . . . at sunrise. (Glances at star.) No use to tell them it lacks but an hour of day, the star is past the third bar. (Paces up and down.) Well, the game is played. No more merry nights, nor risks, nor fights, God pardon us; only to swing, and swing under an empty sky. Humph, a fitting death, in the Spring of Dawn.

2D VOICE

(Moaning.) The gibbet, the gibbet!

VILLON

Nay, friend, 'tis but one more dance. There are none who dance so lightly as they who have nothing under their heels! Why listen, (raises his arm in gesture and the lamp casts a shadow like the gallows, four rags hanging from his sleeve move grotesquely like pendant figures; he sees it and cowers back.) The gibbet, the gibbet! It is an omen. (Turns away shudderingly and then, fascinated, turns slowly back and raises his arm again, watching the shadows.) One fat and round and kicking lustily. That'll be thee, Trois Echelles. One small and straight, hanging heavily. That'll be thee, Jehan le Loup. There's for thee, Casin Cholet. And one thin and long, fluttering like a leaf. And that'll be I. A dead leaf blown by an ill wind. I, Francois Villon, Jinger of Rhymes by the grace of God, kicking, kicking—God! (After a moment he straightens himself and laughs loudly and defiantly.) A merry jest Fate has played us! Come, come friends, no man shall say Francois Villon went to his death howling like a dog! Come, cheer up friends, (beating on the door) cheer up, cheer up! (With an increasing and desperate bravado.) And listen to your master! Why, by the shadow of God, I'll make a ballad, we have still an hour!

VOICES (Wailing.) Only an hour! Only an hour!

VILLON Keep still! Listen while I make a ballad, a Ballad of the Gibbet, Pardieu! Who says we shall go without a swan song? I'll write it on the wall, and all good thieves that pass this way shall see it and remember us, who shall have gone before. (Takes chalk from his belt and writes feverishly as he composes.)

"Brothers and men that shall after us be,
Let not your hearts be hard to us"—

Find a rhyme for gibbet, Casin Cholet, you wine sack—

"Ye wot no man so wise is born
That keeps his wisdom constantly"—

Is't not good? Answer me, or I'll beat you when we are in hell!

1ST VOICE 'Tis good, 'tis excellent good. I would I had a wash of posset ere we go.

VILLON (More and more impressed as the horror of the picture and a realization of the nearness sweeps over him.)

"The rain out of heaven has washed us clean,
The sun has scorched us black and bare."

(Leaning against the door and staring in front of him, the chalk dropped unnoticed from his fingers.)

"Round we are tossed and here and there,
Here and there at the wild wind's will—
Here and there at the wild wind's will—
Never a moment my body is still.
Birds they are busy about my face—

(Breaks off with a cry of horror, covers his face with his hands.)

"Ah God, pity us out of Thy grace!"

(Throws himself upon the stool, his face in his hands.)

SUNRISE. (Continued.)

Silence. A bugle blows far off and the star pales as the first pink of dawn flushes the sky seen thru the window bars. A key rattles in the lock and the Dauphin enters. He is about eight years old, clad in velvet, the collar of Knighthood about his neck; tousled yellow hair about a wilful little face. He stands half shyly, looking at Villon who raises his head and looks at him with haggard, uncomprehending eyes.)

- PRINCE Good morrow.
- VILLON Good day, little one. Is—is your father, coming behind thee?
- PRINCE (Starting) My father! Nay, he is asleep, they were all asleep and I ran away. Don't you know me? You saved my dog last summer when he fell in the moat.
- VILLON (Kneeling and taking the child's hand.) Why, 'tis my very good friend, Monsier le Dauphin. And the dog, Coureur, was it not?
- PRINCE Yes.
- VILLON A noble beast. It would have been shame to see him die.
- PRINCE You jumped in the moat and saved him. Why don't you come and tell me stories any more? I never see you any more.
- VILLON Your father—got angry—with me. So I don't come around any more (aside) at least not in the day time.
- PRINCE And I don't like that coat. Where's the pretty red one with the silver lions all over it?
- VILLON O, the lions got tired standing on their hind legs so long. So they ran away.
- PRINCE Ran away! Do you think mine will run away, my new one? I was knighted yesterday.
- VILLON You were? That's a pretty lion on the collar, isn't it?
- PRINCE That's the Cordon Bleu like father wears. I am a knight now. And knights always help their friends when they are in trouble, don't they?

SUNRISE. (Continued.)

- VILLON Yes Prince, when they can.
- PRINCE That's the way they do in stories Pierre sings. He gets them out of a book so they must be true. So I came to help you. Are'nt you cold here?
- VILLON Not as cold as I thought I was going to be.
- PRINCE When I was going to bed I heard some one crying and there was Nannette all huddled up so, and crying. She said you were in prison and that you were a friend of hers.
- VILLON (Softly.) Nannette, Nannette.
- PRINCE They wouldn't let me see father to ask about you, and they got cross and made me go to bed. But you saved Coureur. So I got the key. I knew where it was, Nannette told me where you were. Take it. (Hands him a large key.)
- VILLON One day I see a child weeping, a noble beast struggling for its life. I wet my skin and make them both happy, the child and the dog. Voila! It is a boomerang! (He takes the key and then hesitates looking at the door behind which are his friends .) Wasn't there—another key? (The boy shakes his head. He takes the child's hand.) Prince, when you are older you will doubtless marvel that I should preach, but remember, there was a man, (touches his chest,) in black despair, in the outer dark where there is weeping only, and gnashing of teeth, and, (touching the boy's hair,) the sun rose. When you wear a crown on that yellow head, remember the thing you did this day. And when you are as near—what I was near today, you will not be sorry of this, your first act of knighthood. (They open a door thru which is seen a vista of green fields and a road bordered by trees in pink and white blossoms. The sun is just about to rise.)
- VILLON (Longingly.) Beyond that dip, the river, beyond the river the sheltering woods of La Vaucelle, and life, life, life. (Turns to the child.) My Lord Prince, you are going to get—an awful spanking. Get back to bed before they find out.

SUNRISE. (Concluded.)

PRINCE And will you come back some day and tell me stories?

VILLON Yes. I shall tell you a famous story, (kissing his hand.)
 Goodbye—and take care of Coureur. (Exit Prince.)

3D VOICE (Softly.) Francois.

VILLON (Sadly.) Mes amis!

VOICE Sh! they sleep exhausted, but I heard all—you were ever a devil for luck, Villon. Good speed you, and forget us not.

VILLON Trois Echelles, my comrade! I will stay!

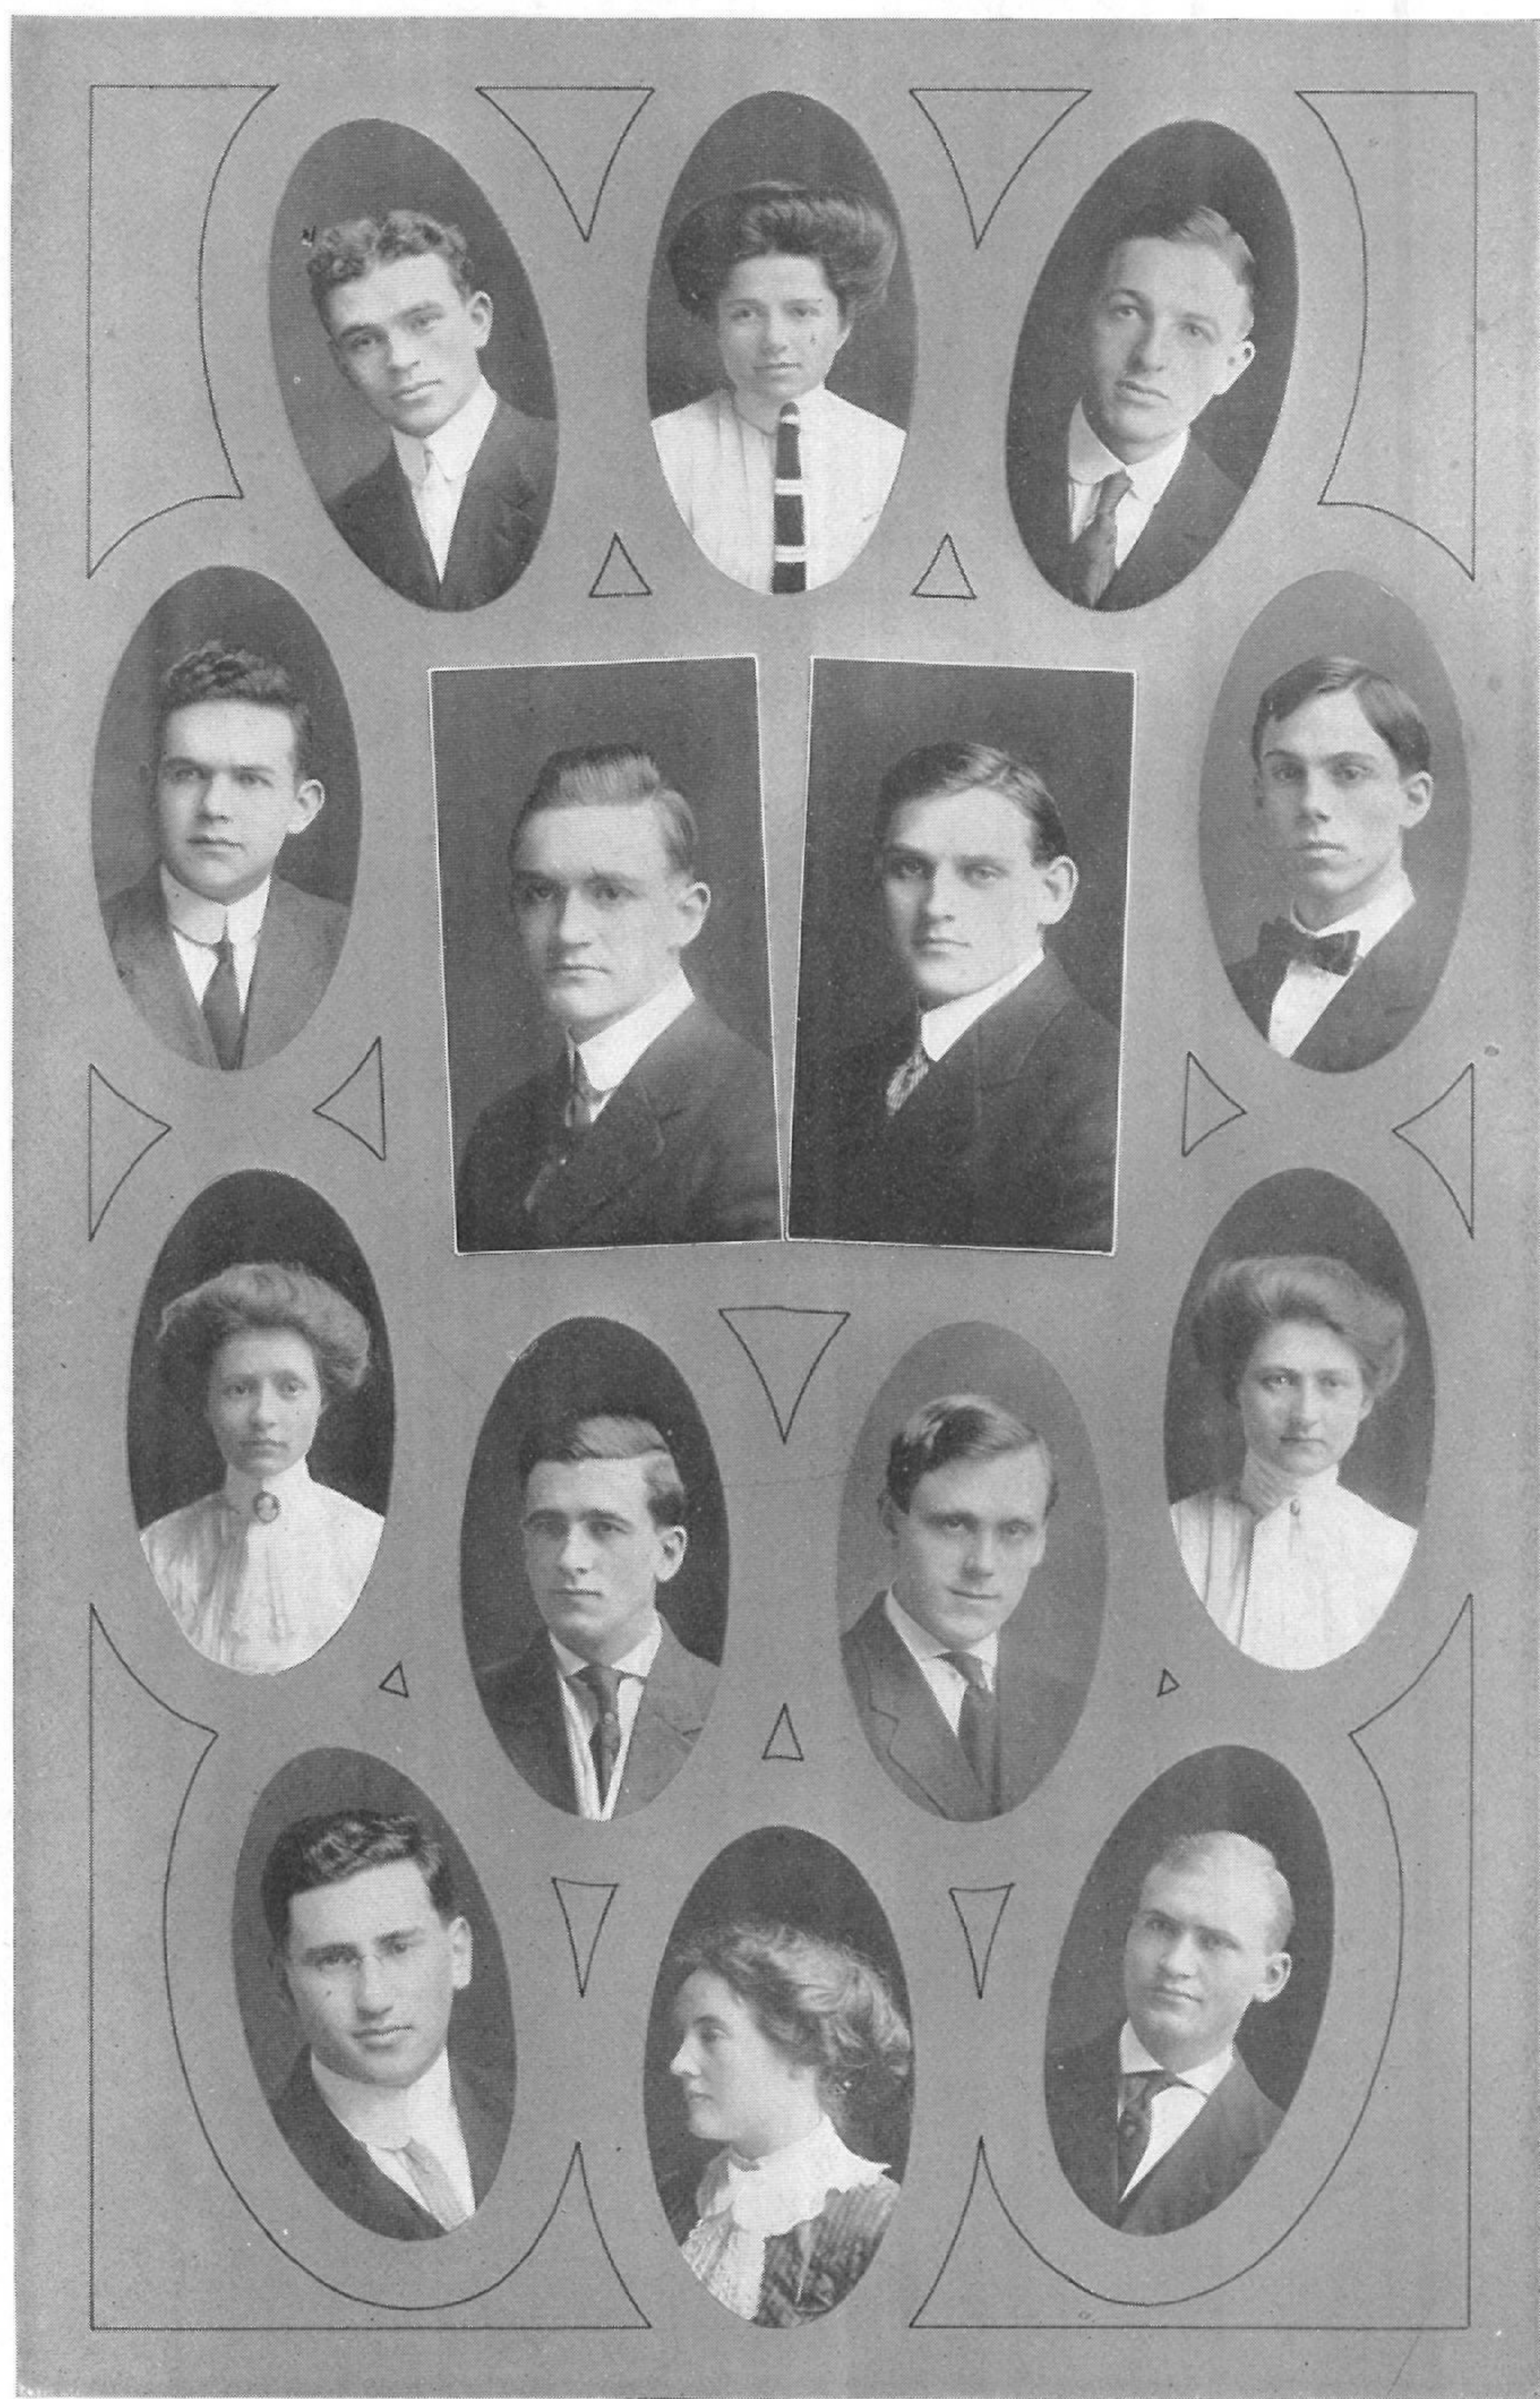

VOICE Get you gone quickly, fool! And carry my love to the Fir
 Cone and Denise and—

VILLON (Brokenly.) My good friends!

VOICE Au revoir. Never fear but we shall meet; hell is not so large! (A bugle blows. The sun rises and the clank of approaching soldiers is heard. Villon hesitates, looks at the sunrise and with a mocking laugh plunges down the steep into the light, singing:

 “Life is a gamble and Fate holds the ace.”
 (The song floats back faintly as the curtain descends.)

History of University of Washington Daily

From a semi-literary monthly, called the Washington Visitor, and first appearing in 1885, has evolved the UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON DAILY. The paper has ever grown from the beginning and although the Washington Visitor lasted only a few numbers, it had a new birth in the Pacific Wave, which first appeared in 1891. The Pacific Wave gained immediate popularity, but suffered a relapse soon after its beginning, and was discontinued for a short time. Since 1893, however, its progress has been rapid. At first a monthly, it became a bi-weekly in 1897, a bi-weekly in newspaper form in 1901, a weekly in 1906, a semi-weekly in 1907, and a daily in 1908.

The Pacific Daily Wave became the University of Washington Daily in the fall of 1909. In 1895, a rival paper, the College Idea, was started, but after an existence of two years it was absorbed by the Pacific Wave.

When permanently established in 1893, the Pacific Wave was voted the official organ of the University. The Pacific Wave Publishing Company, a private corporation composed of university students, took hold of the paper when it became a weekly, but on account of financial failure, the Board of Control voted to take it over again. Heretofore, the paper had been supported by popular subscription, but the Board of Control, on receiving the paper in 1907 voted to support it by adding a compulsory subscription of one dollar to the registration fee.

Roy D. Rudio, '09, was the editor who established the paper as a daily in the fall of 1908. Since January, 1909, the paper has had ever increasing success, as the Pacific Daily Wave until the fall of 1909, and since then as the University of Washington Daily.

Roy D. Pinkerton became editor in January, 1909, and in his administration telegraph service was added.

Under Editor Verne Fitch, who assumed office in February, 1910, the daily has become one of the best college papers in the country. Today it is a six column, four page paper, and has a telegraph service over United Press direct wire. It has a Northwest desk, which attends to Pacific coast university correspondence and high school news in the various parts of the states. During the past few months, the Northwest department has been made one of the best organized branches of the Daily.

The entire paper is made on the campus in the university's own quarters and on its own press. In front, in the main floor of the Educational building are the reporter's table and the city editor's desk where stories are brought in and written up. Close by are the inner offices of the Northwest editor, telegraph editor, news editor, managing editor, and editor-in-chief.

Local news is always given first place in the Daily's columns, and the staff is one of the best organized of its kind in the country. Every member, from the reporter up, is made directly responsible to some one higher in rank until the editor is reached. Altogether, the make-up of the Daily compares favorably with that of any of the metropolitan newspapers.

The Eighth Annual Varsity Ball was given in the Washington State Building, Friday evening, December third. The beauty of the building and the tasteful decorations made it far superior to any other university function that has ever been held. Strands of English ivy, cut flowers and festoons of purple and gold were used in the class booths. Huge date palms and bay trees completed the decorations.

All "W" men, the guests of honor, were presented with favors.

CAMPUSDAY

Campus Day

Six consecutive observances of this interesting day have fixed it as one of the features in the academic year at the University of Washington. The first celebration was held on May 6, 1904. At that time the primeval forest had possession of most of the large campus, and large stretches of the shores of both Lake Washington and Lake Union could not be reached except in boats.

When it was announced that, if the students were willing, a day would be set aside for good, earnest work on the campus, the response was enthusiastic. The young men came in rough clothes with all sorts of picks, shovels, axes and rakes. Captains and lieutenants had been appointed for each class, who had previously viewed the tasks assigned. At the tap of the large bell the "armies" marched to the attack, and when the day was done everybody expressed surprise at the aggregate of useful work accomplished.

Splendid paths were built — miles of them — and the entire shore of Lake Washington was made approachable, as were the ravines on the eastern slope of the campus. The large Freshman class slashed and burned a wilderness on the western side of the campus. While the students had their own company formation, the men of the faculty were organized into an awkward squad and assigned to the unattractive task of filling an ugly and deep ditch in front of the main building. This huge task was also accomplished at the expense of many blistered hands.

The portion of work assigned to the young ladies was to furnish the meal at noon-time. Here again the military formation was resorted to, that each class might be assigned its share of the burden. Wives of the professors found opportunity to aid in this part of the programme. It is needless to say that the feast was immensely successful.

Campus Day (Continued)

After the luncheon was disposed of, a few speeches were made, some college songs were sung, and the work of the day was resumed. In the evening all assembled for an informal party.

Each succeeding year the same sort of programme was followed. More trails were built, the natural theater was cleared, the track was improved, a bandstand was built, approaches were made to the boathouse, trees were moved and named, ground was cleared for an increase of the lawn, and all sorts of rubbish collected and burned. The Governor of the state, the board of control, members of the legislature, mayor of the city, officers of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition, and other prominent citizens visited the workers on these occasions, and gave earnest messages of approval.

Improvements have been made from year to year in the method of laying out the work, much of which is carefully done by the engineers some weeks in advance. The exposition has necessitated some modifications in former plans, but much work still remains to be done. In the future, when all the needed paths are completed, there will be work to keep them in repair. There will be innumerable ways of beautifying the campus by the work of our own hands. Graduates have begun to return to inspect the work they helped to do while in the university, and each one has expressed the joy experienced when students and professors joined in one big, wholesome day of work out-of-doors on the place they all love as home.

Military Drill

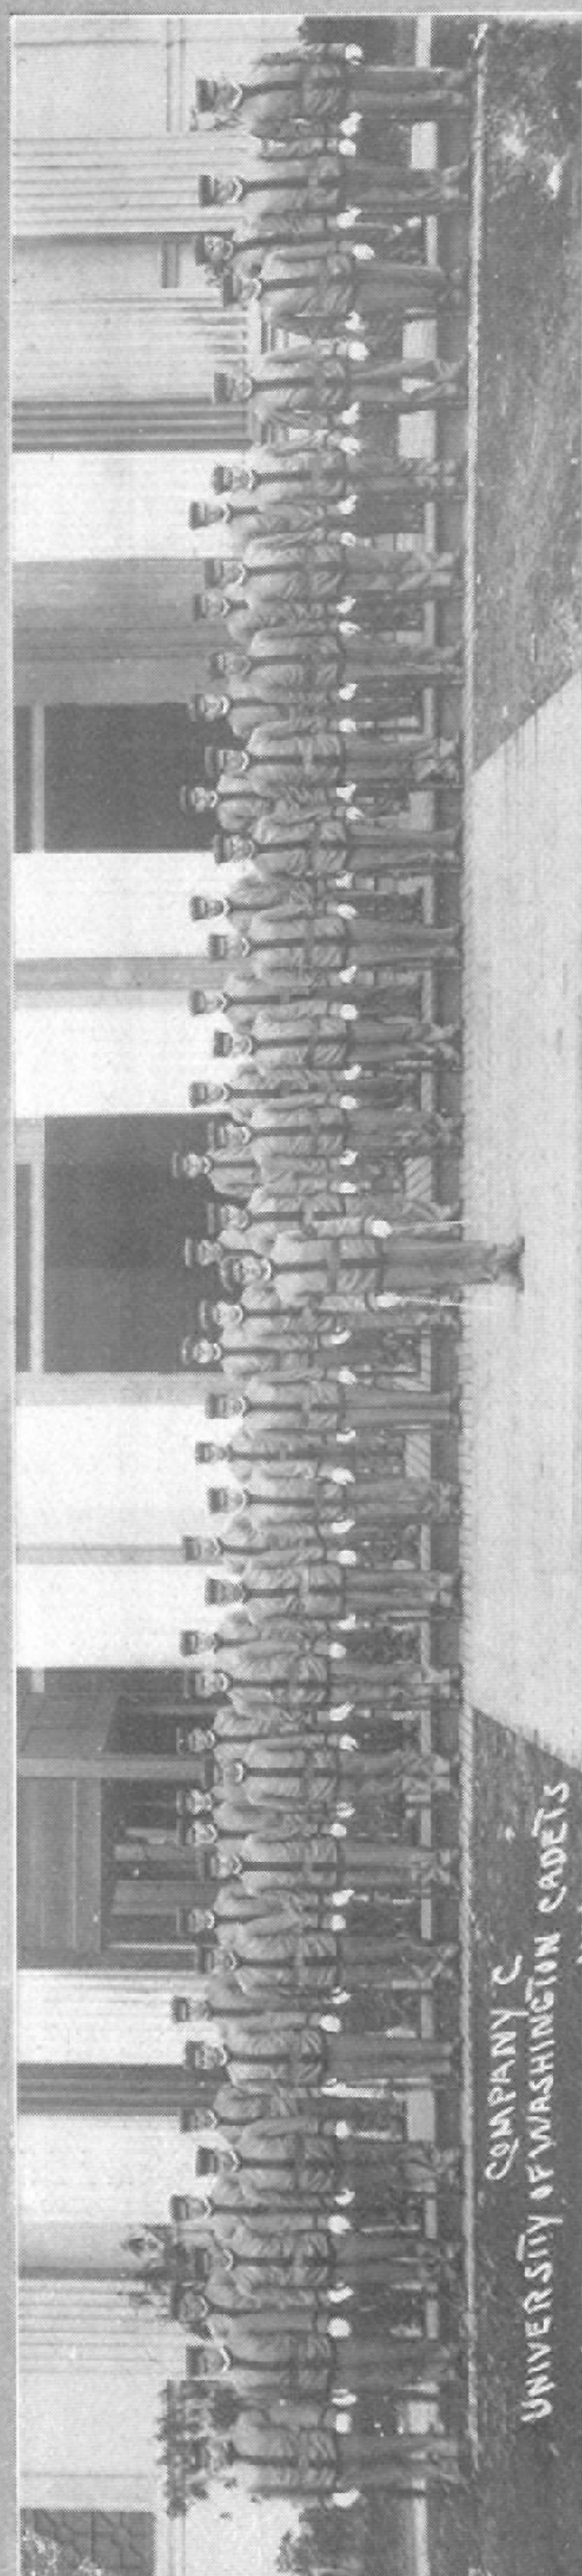

Realizing the importance of having at its command a body of men, trained to some extent at least, in the knowledge of military science, the United States government details to schools and colleges from the active list of the army, an officer to superintend the instruction of the students in this branch.

This is made necessary, since the strength of the standing army is entirely inadequate to cope with the large numbers of trained troops of other countries, or to protect in any degree from invasion our country or its possessions.

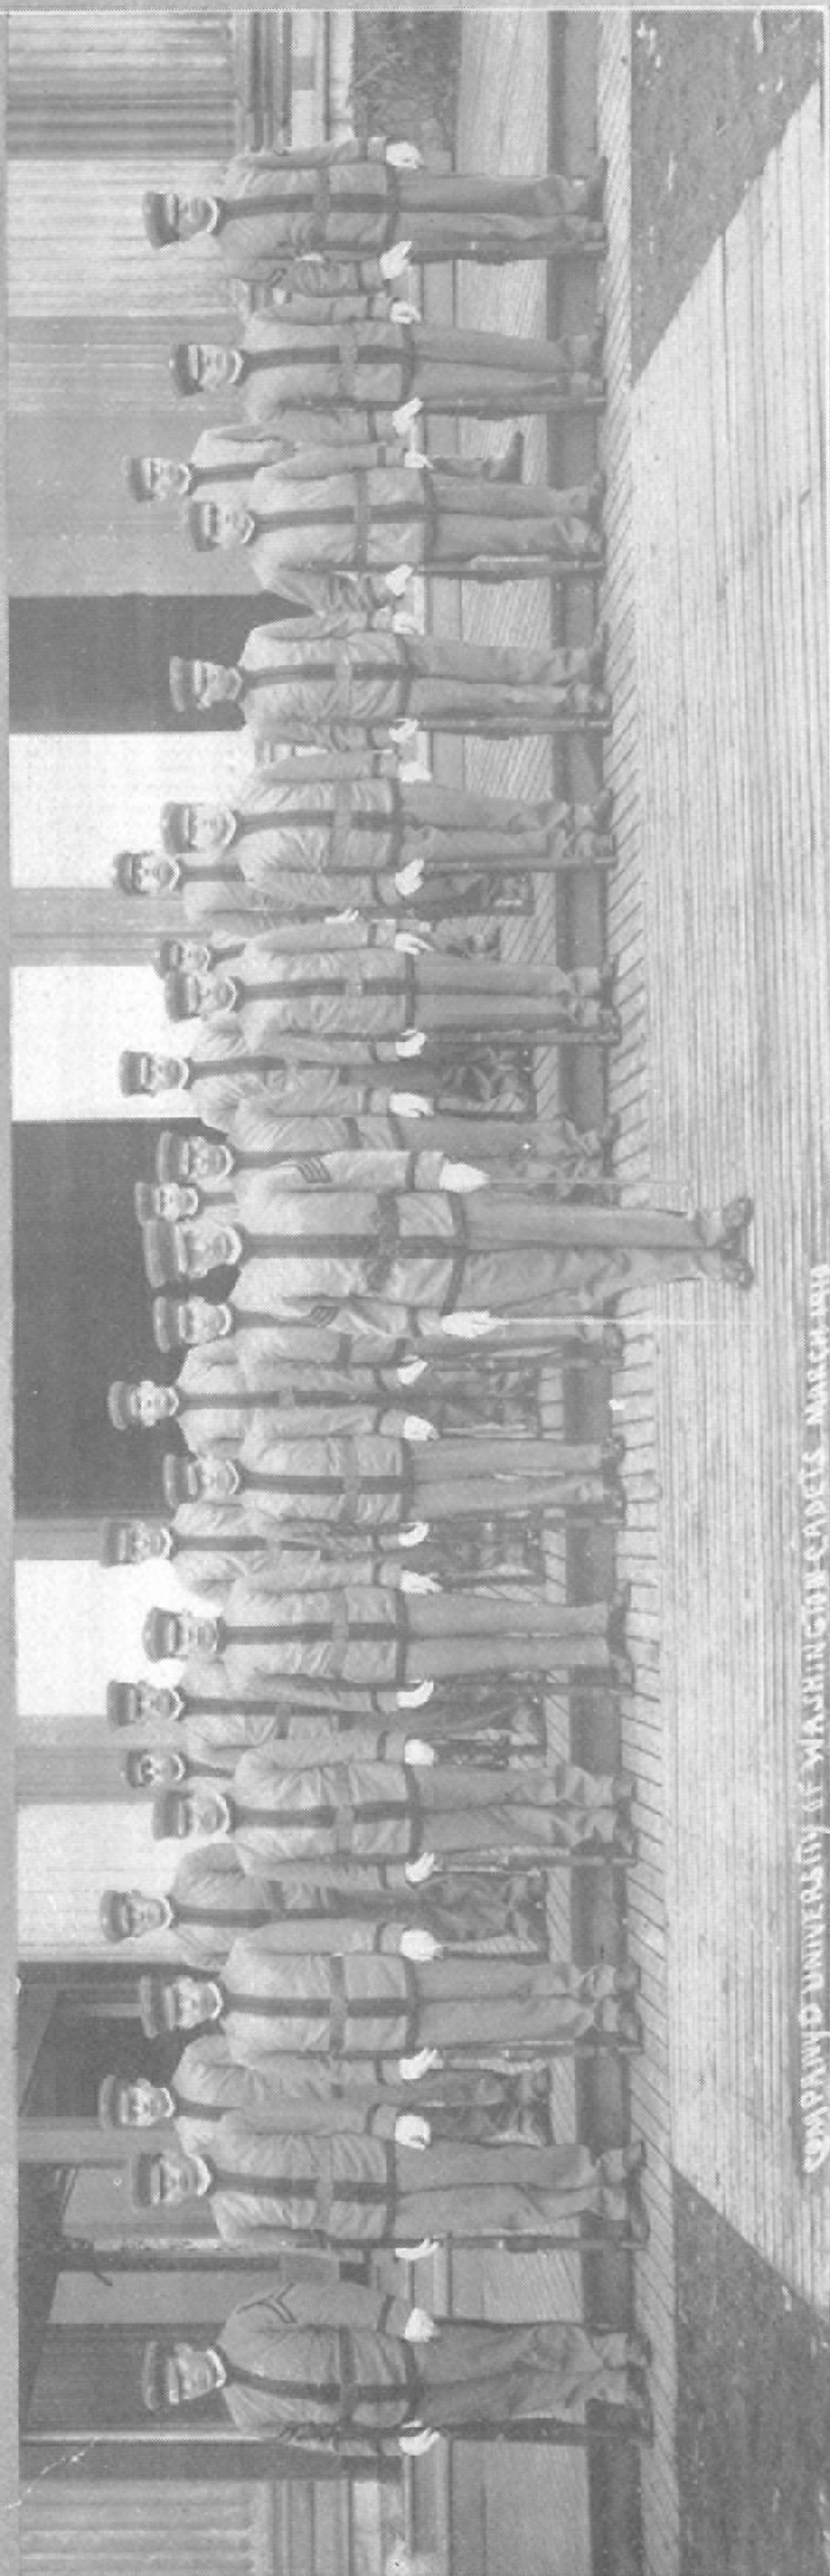

So, in the case of war, our army must come from the young men who are now at college, school or in business, and to send these men out to face trained troops without the slightest idea of how to protect themselves from either bullets or disease, would indeed be folly, and, under circumstances other than those of dire necessity, criminal.

It is hoped that in the two years' course offered at the University the cadet battalions may gain sufficient knowledge of drill, small-arms firing, and sanitation to be able to protect and take care of themselves in either field or camp.

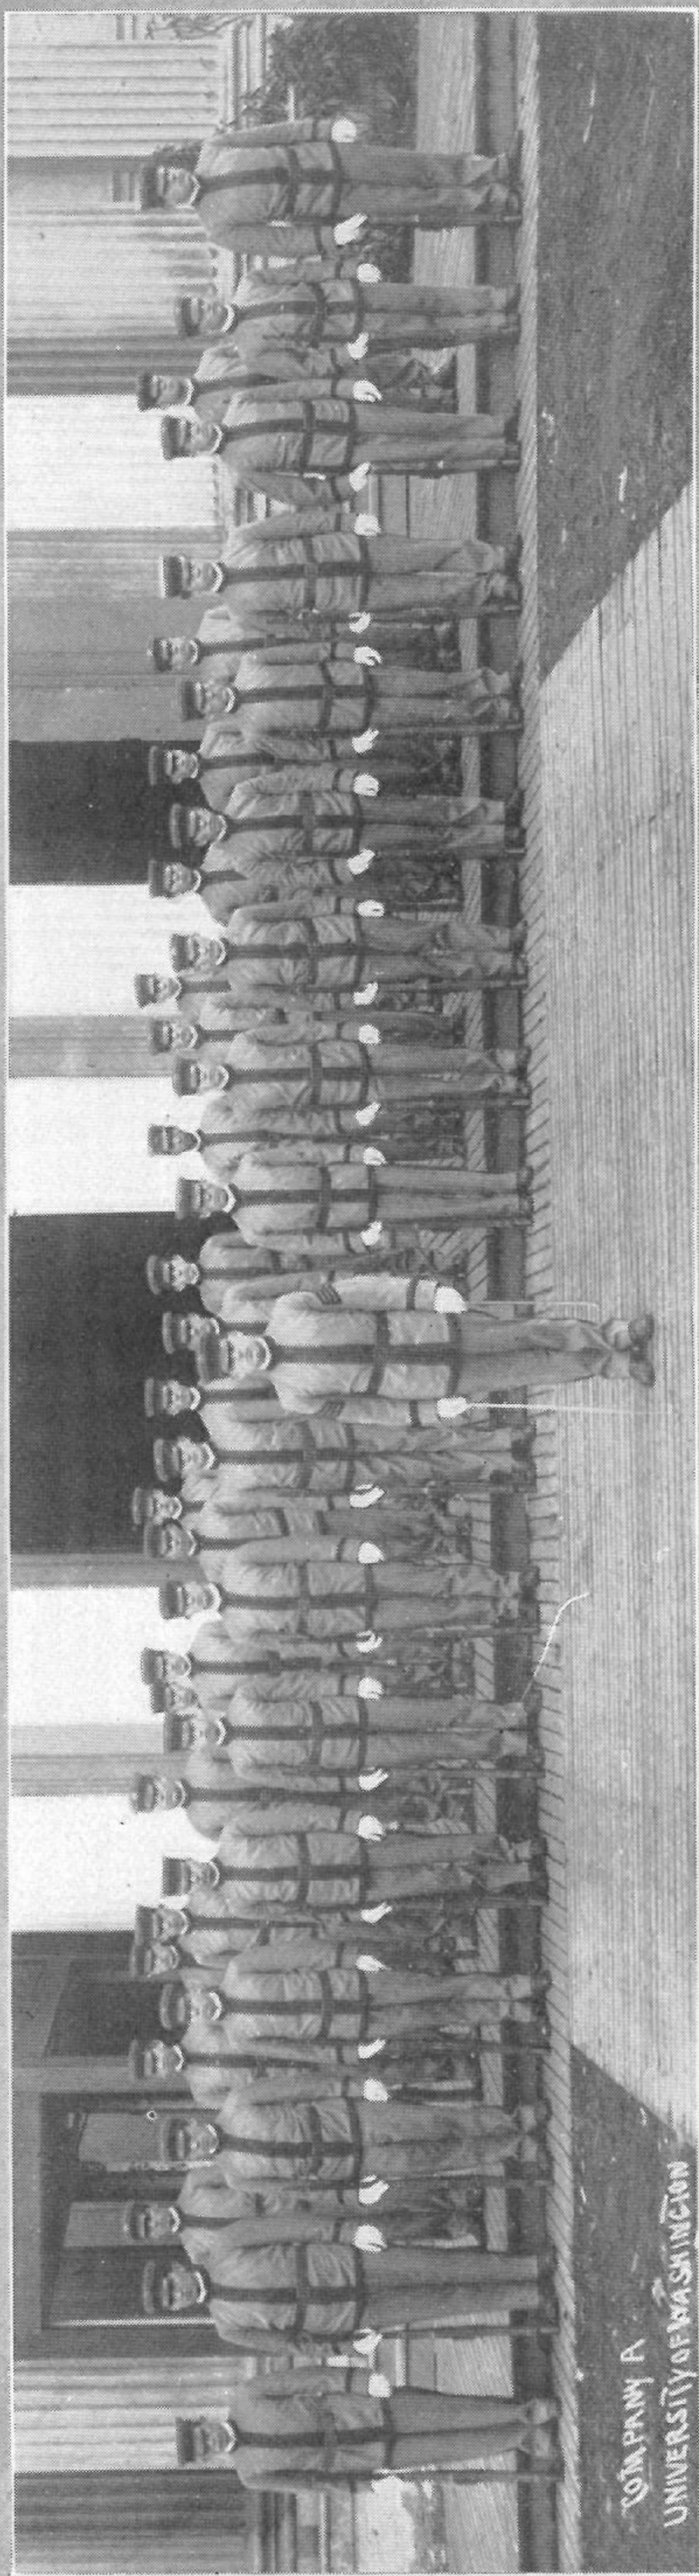

In addition to this, to qualify them in some degree to impart this knowledge to others who have lacked opportunity to get it, for the efficiency of any army depends on the health of its men and their training.

TESTIMONIALS

Pembina, North Dakota, Oct. 3, 1905.

To Whom It May Concern:
We, the Board of County Commissioners of Pembina County, North Dakota, do hereby state that during the past five years we have sent several patients to the North Dakota Liquor Institute, located at Grand Forks, North Dakota, for treatment of the liquor and drug habit; and they have been permanently cured and have become good and prosperous citizens and they accumulated property. We consider the institution well worthy of patronage.

A Sample Board Meeting

- 7:30—Hour of meeting. Edgar J. Wright sits in solitary splendor in Y. W. C. A. room, scribbling on scraps of paper.
- 7:35—Prof. Thomson arrives in great haste.
- 7:40—President Brown saunters in with Dode Brinker and Rex Roudebush. Will Coyle follows.
- 7:41—Enter Joseph Barto, junior representative.
- 7:45—Graduate manager comes in, hat in hand, followed closely by Simonds. Prater effects entrance behind them.
- 7:48—Dean Priest enters. Meeting called to order.
- 7:50—Brown appoints Simonds acting secretary. Simonds gets out paper and pencil. Minutes and roll-call dispensed with.
- 7:59—Enter Ernest Wells, accompanied by Sylvia Wold. Simonds replaces pencil and paper carefully. Minutes read and approved.
- 8:10—Reports of committees. Commons committee reported defunct. Stadium committee gives up ghost on table.
- 8:20—Unfinished business. Rowing proposition is taken up. Wells, Brinker and Wright confer on side. Barto draws pictures on copy of Daily. Moved, seconded and carried that Coach Conibear be asked to restrain himself within the two-mile limit while verbally chastising his crew. Moved and seconded that one barrel of gasoline be purchased for the launch. Wright springs to feet in haste. Asks what it will cost. Manager Zednick called upon for answer. Manager is of opinion that it will not exceed five dollars, and may even be less. Wright subsides. Motion passed.
- 9:00—New business. Simonds moves reduction of student fee to one dollar per stude, which shall be devoted to redecorating barber poles. Motion lost for want of second. Capt. Lord asks for permission to address board. Permission declined. Musicians present petition for one new drum. Petition referred to athletic committee. Coyle recommends giving of "W's" to members of co-ed crew who succeed in rowing in spite of Miss Merrick. Recommendation referred to committee consisting of Dean Priest, Manager Zednick and Bill Prater.
- 9:20—Enter Dean Roberts.
- 9:21—Motion to adjourn is in order.
- 9:22—Manager reads four-page inventory of canoe house contents.
- 9:45—Meeting adjourns.

CAMPUS BUILDINGS—

Bookstore (affectionately known as chem shack)—Large stone structure in rear of Denny Hall.

Garbage Incinerator—Directly in front of the bookstore. It is the only thing that smokes on the campus since the inauguration of the anti-tobacco crusade.

STUDENTS AND OTHER CAMPUS ACTIVITIES—

H. B. Conibear—Thursday night at the board of control meeting.

Victor Zednick—At his office between 12 and 1 every third Saturday.

Edwin J. Brown—Hemphill's grocery.

Wylie Hemphill—Edwin J. Brown's law office.

Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity—The night before election at the library escorting dorm girls home.

Chi Winn—The College Inn.

Hart Willis—Dallas, Texas.

Fuzz Reser—Formerly the Rathskeller, now the Alpha Xi Delta house.

Fred Angevine—Pi Phi lodge

Bob Denney—See Angevine, above.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon—Journalism Educational Palace.

Joe Barto, Cleo King, Jack Hensley, Joe Morgan—Address unknown since election.

A SOPH ANSWER.

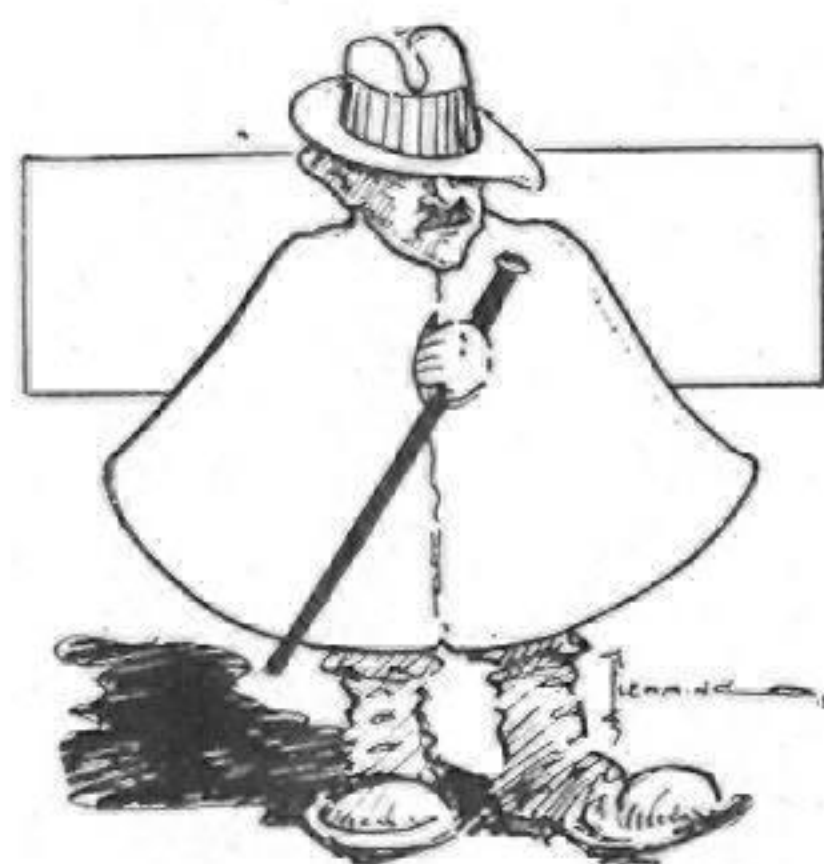

Scene: Faculty meeting.

Librarian Henry outlines course for next year. One includes work in typewriting, shelving and similar processes.

Up jumps excited professor:

"Do I understand that the College of Liberal Arts of this university will allow TYPEWRITING to count toward a BACHELOR OF ARTS degree?" he shouts.

"No, indeed," comes the mild reply; "nothing useful ever counts toward a bachelor of arts degree."

This organization was formed to further a feeling of fellowship among university nighthawks. Students who stay up all night to see Halley's comet, or comic opera stars, or little things like that, are eligible.

OPPICERS AND MEMBERS

Ki Winn, Supreme Ruler.
 Buster Philip, Exalted Emperor.
 Clarence Eagen, Omnipotent Nabob.
 Pete Thompson, Enlightened Guardian.
 Jim Sturgis, Sublime Magistrate.
 Bill Spurck, Commander of King's Bodyguard.
 Rud Reser, Jack Frater, Walt Beebe and Pat Tammany, The Army.
 PUBLICATION—The Youth's Companion.
 OFFICIAL SONG—Lips That Touch Liquor Shall Never Touch Mine.

The Oval Club say they used 50 lbs. of wax for their dance. But—

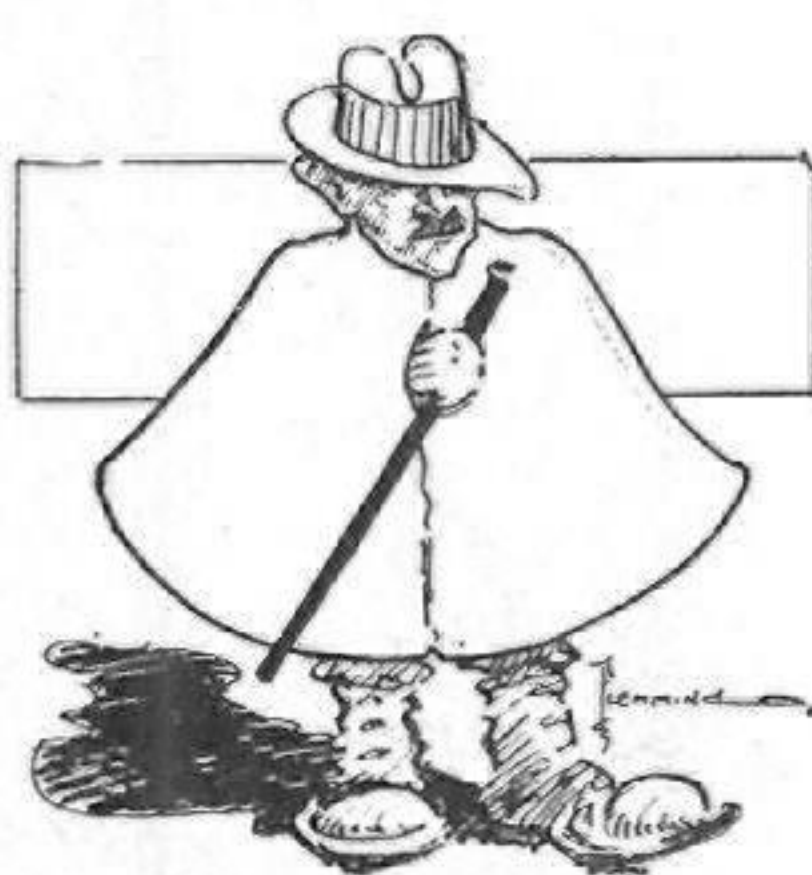

HANDY ANDY.

DELTA GAMMA (at the piano)—What shall I play?

DELTA TAU (absent-mindedly)—What kind of a hand have you got?

HINTS TO THE FRESHMEN NO. 53—

If you happen to be a leader of a band or orchestra, it is perfectly proper for you to demand a few hundred dollars' worth of Tyees for your services on one day.

MISSING WORD CONTEST.

In order to encourage the inventive genius of the callow undergraduate, The Tyee has decided to inaugurate a simple missing word contest, and has provided handsome prizes for the successful guessers.

PRIZES

1. One chemistry shack. This is in perfectly good condition and would make an elegant watch charm.
2. Joseph A. Bernhard (contributed by the dorms.)
3. One handsome meal ticket at the University of Washington Commons.
4. One track coach.
5. An autographed volume bound in art nouveau of the complete works of Ralph Swazey.

The next TEN winners will each receive one of the latest types of shower baths. These were installed by the Fiji's in their new house, but as far as we can judge, have never been used.

RULES.

The contestant should fill in the blank with the missing adjective. Write on all sides of the paper.

Professor Osborne is the ——— looking member of the faculty.

Steward Bernhard serves the ——— meals in the university.

Dr. Byers has a ——— disposition.

The girls say Capt. Kerkow looks ——— when he wears his two medals on his uniform.

The Daily is the ——— college paper published on the campus.

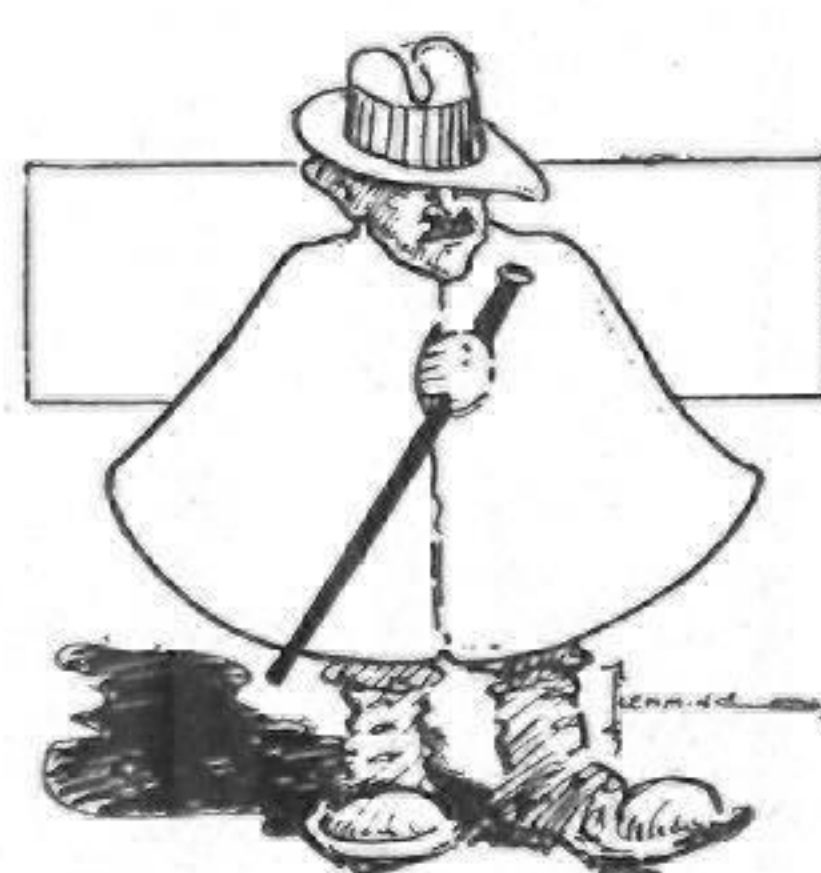

The plan for a commons was a ——— one.

Gross is the ——— politician at Washington.

Glenn Hoover has the ——— head of all the students.

Dr. Custis gives very ——— lectures.

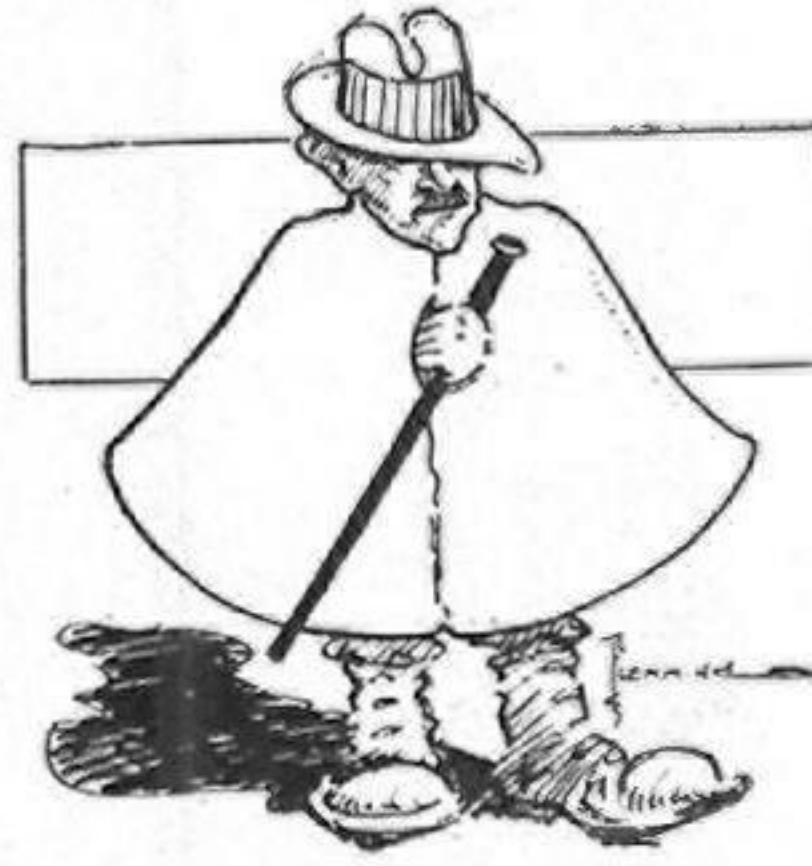

The first Wisconsin fund committee was the ——— aggregation of workers ever gathered together.

THEY DON'T TAKE CELLULOID COLLARS ALONG.

RECORDING ANGEL (looking at mortality list in newspaper)—I see another frat man has gone.

ST. PETER (yawning)—I wonder where they all go to?

THE MAJOR EVENTS OF THE YEAR.

Pinkerton calls Professor Stevens a pervaricator and gets away with it.

Fijis pledge Portland High School's entire football team; the California chapters object and all bets are declared off.

Melville Mucklestone and Professor Cole attend class.

Ralph Whaley made stroke of the 'varsity crew (by the Spokane papers).

Bernhard feeds the dormitories shredded sawdust and still lives.

Rev. Roudebush receives divinity degree from the student's directory.

Regents refuse to name auditorium after a living professor. We could suggest some dead ones, but we prefer staying another semester.

Chi Winn holds his mammoth Calithumpian parade, in which every fraternity had a float, for which handsome prizes were awarded.

Glenn Corkery takes a dip in the geyser basin.

The new courses in Swedish and Oriental literature are introduced. Now one can talk politics with the conductor or discuss esthetics with the laundryman.

THE ELEVENTH COMMANDMENT.

When you're trying to cram for some stiff exam,
And you want everything very still,
If some bromide come, with his chat cumbersome,
Just remember, "Thou shalt not kill!"

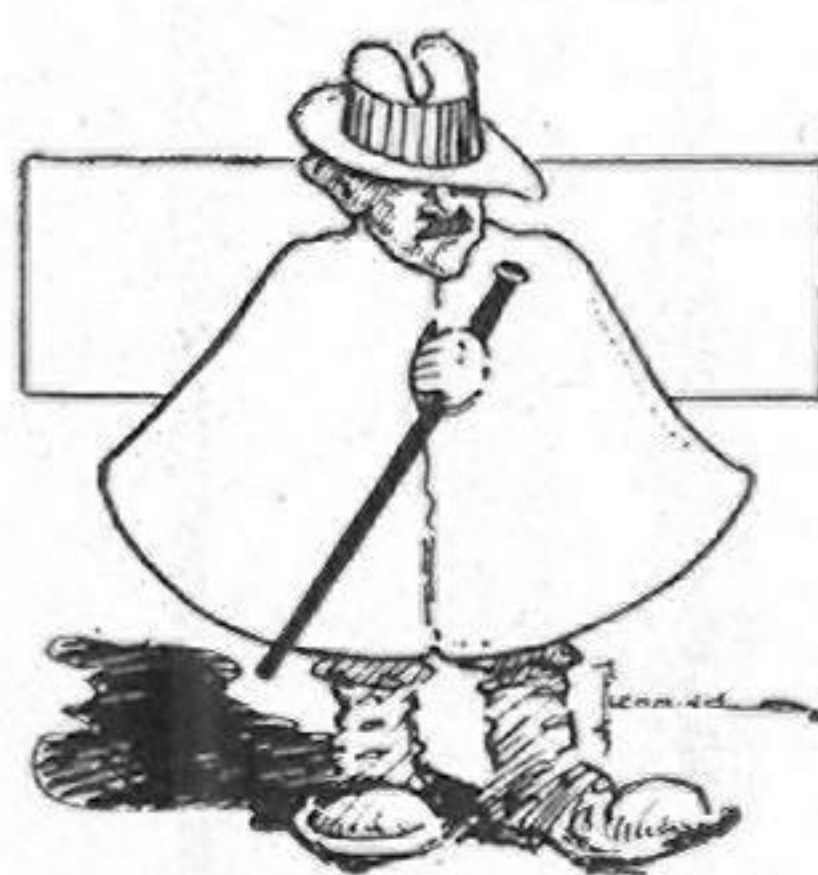

HINTS TO THE FRESHMEN NO. 1,492—

In writing a story for The Daily, be careful to mention Graduate Manager Victor Zednick at least once.

HINTS TO THE FRESHMEN NO. 1,776—

Half-past twelve on the Ad. Clock means 6:45 on any self-respecting tiempiece.

Faculty Perennials

For the benefit of future generations, so that they, too, may be able to laugh at the right time, THE TYEE prints the following list of side-splitting jokes which the professors of the University of Washington tell annually:

CUSTIS, DR. VANDERVEER.

- Joke 1* You cahn and you cahn't,
 You will and you won't;
 You'll be dahmned if you do,
 You'll be dahmned if you don't.

- Joke 2* John Rockefeller says oil and water won't mix
 (Pre-requisite, Joke 1.)

BYERS, DR. HORACE GREELEY.

The Joke. "Speaking of chemistry, I don't think there is much use in studying the subject," said a college graduate to me. "All I remember about it now is that H_2O is water."

Aphroisms That You May Hear Again.

Cuss if you want to, but do it grammatically.

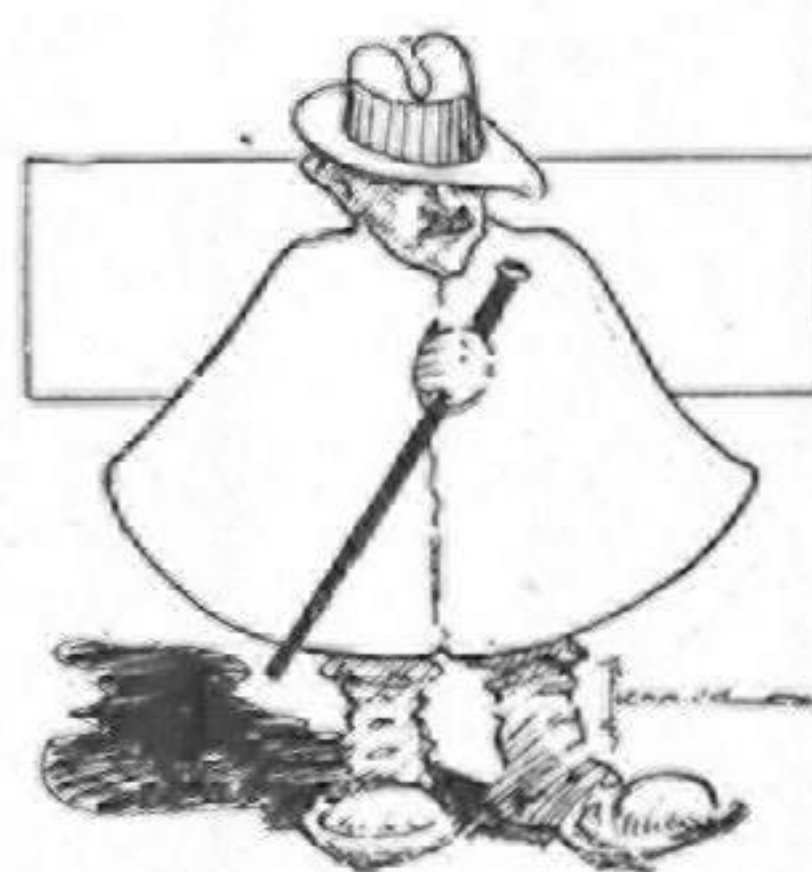

I should feel sorry for the State of Washington if all this class should become professional chemists.

You would be in a quandary, which is a much more elegant expression than hole, if I should ask that question in an exam.

(Omitted 1909-10.)

HAGGETT, DR. ARTHUR S.

In Aristophanes, Hercules and servant come down to cross the Styx. Charon, the boatman, tells the servant to sit in the boat. He uses the Greek word EV, which means "in" or "on." The servant took it to mean "on" and tipped the boat over.

FACULTY PERENNIALS (Continued).

KINCAID, PROF. TREVOR.

Sponges will grow on anything. Many have been found attached to the backs of crabs. If one were inclined to be facetious one might almost call it "sponging on the crab."

MILLIMAN, PROF. LOREN D.

See "Rhetoric Text Book," by Prof. Loren D. Milliman, where the annual jokes are published in full.

SAVERY, DR. WILLIAM.

Is life worth living? It depends on the liver.—Prigged from Punch.

Be good and you will be lonesome.—Ditto from Mark Twain.

The first reader story of how Lincoln rescued a pig from the mire is narrated each year with all its thrilling ethical details.

PADELFORD, PROF. FREDERICK M.

Advice to Young Ladies, given each Semester.

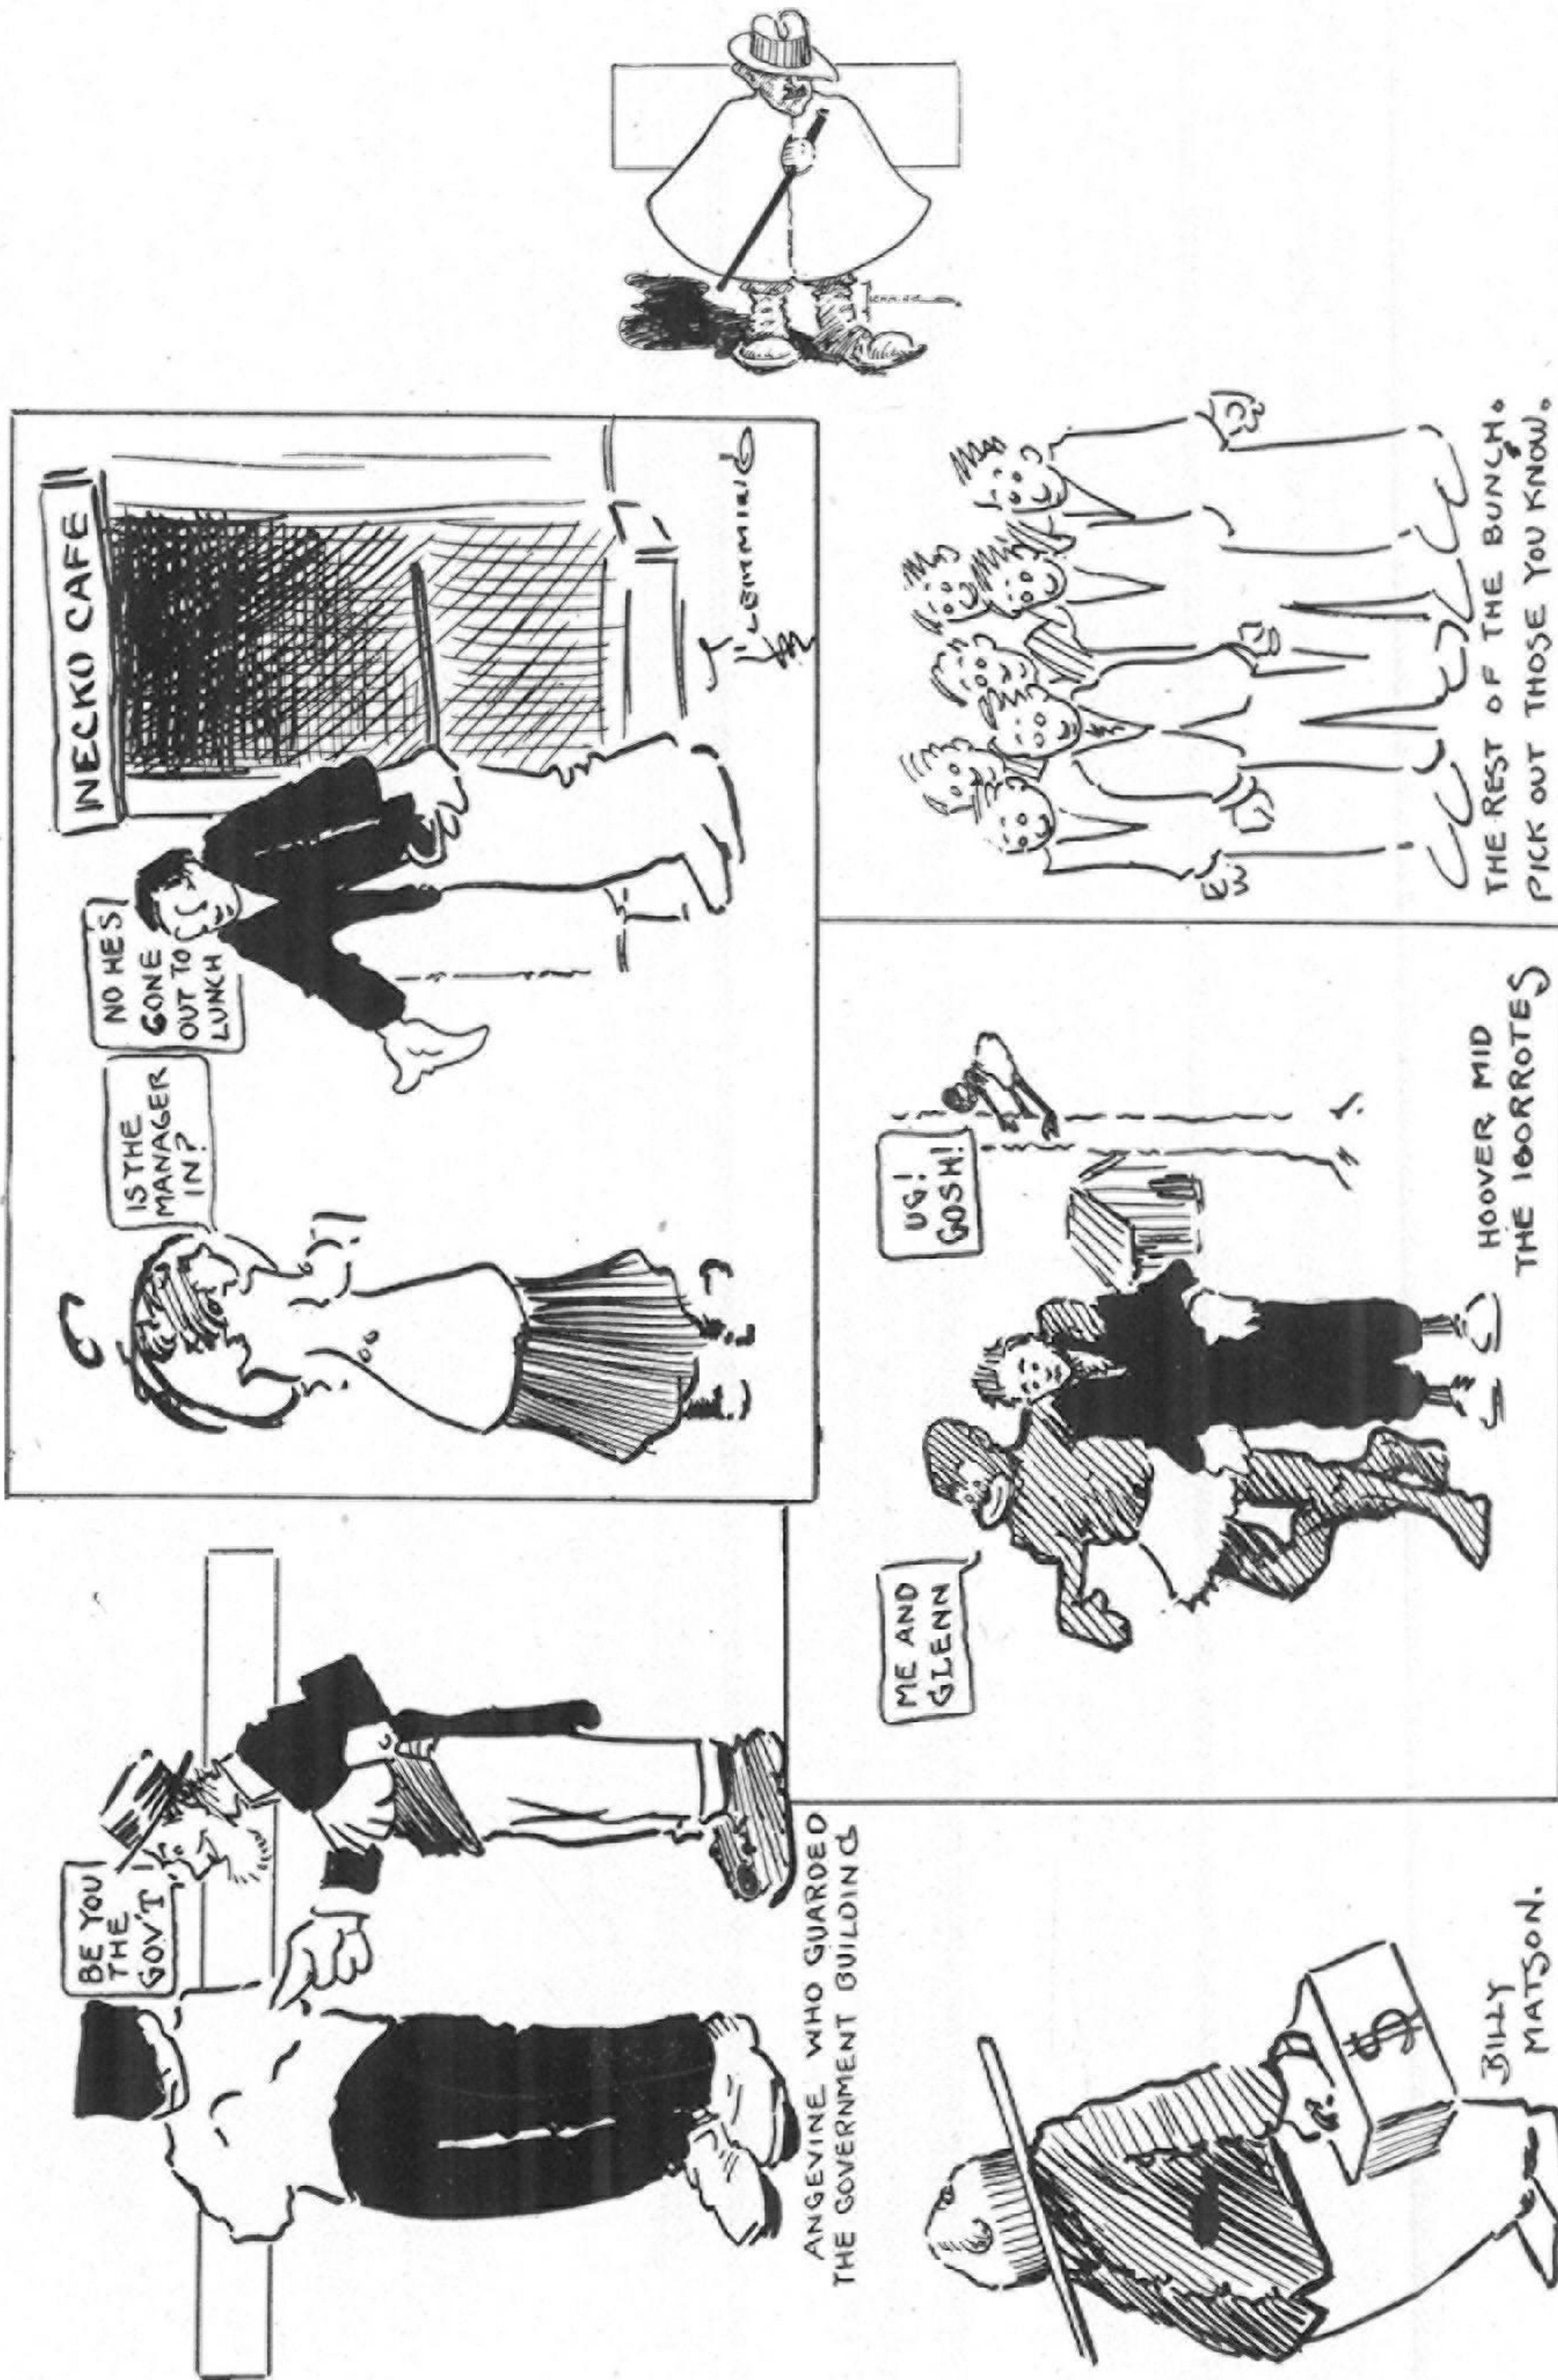

New hats may be worn once in class; old hats not at all.

LANTZ, JUDGE HARVEY.

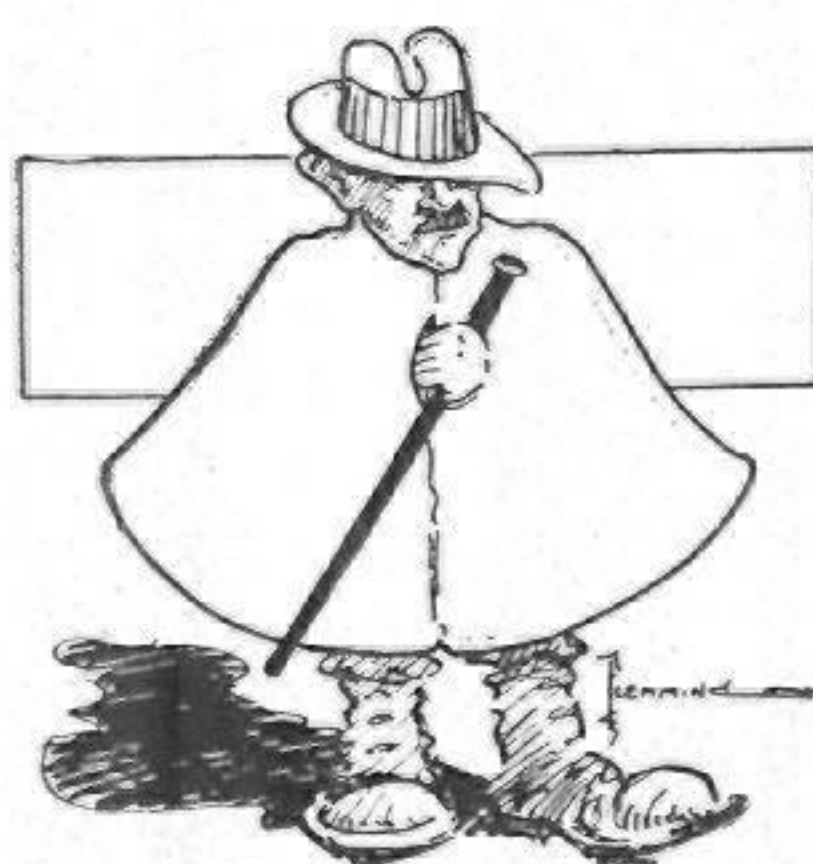

Cut out those side-shows — this is a one-ring circus.

CONDON, DEAN JOHN T.

Well, that's very interesting. That might answer some questions; but not mine.

The Toilers of the Fair.

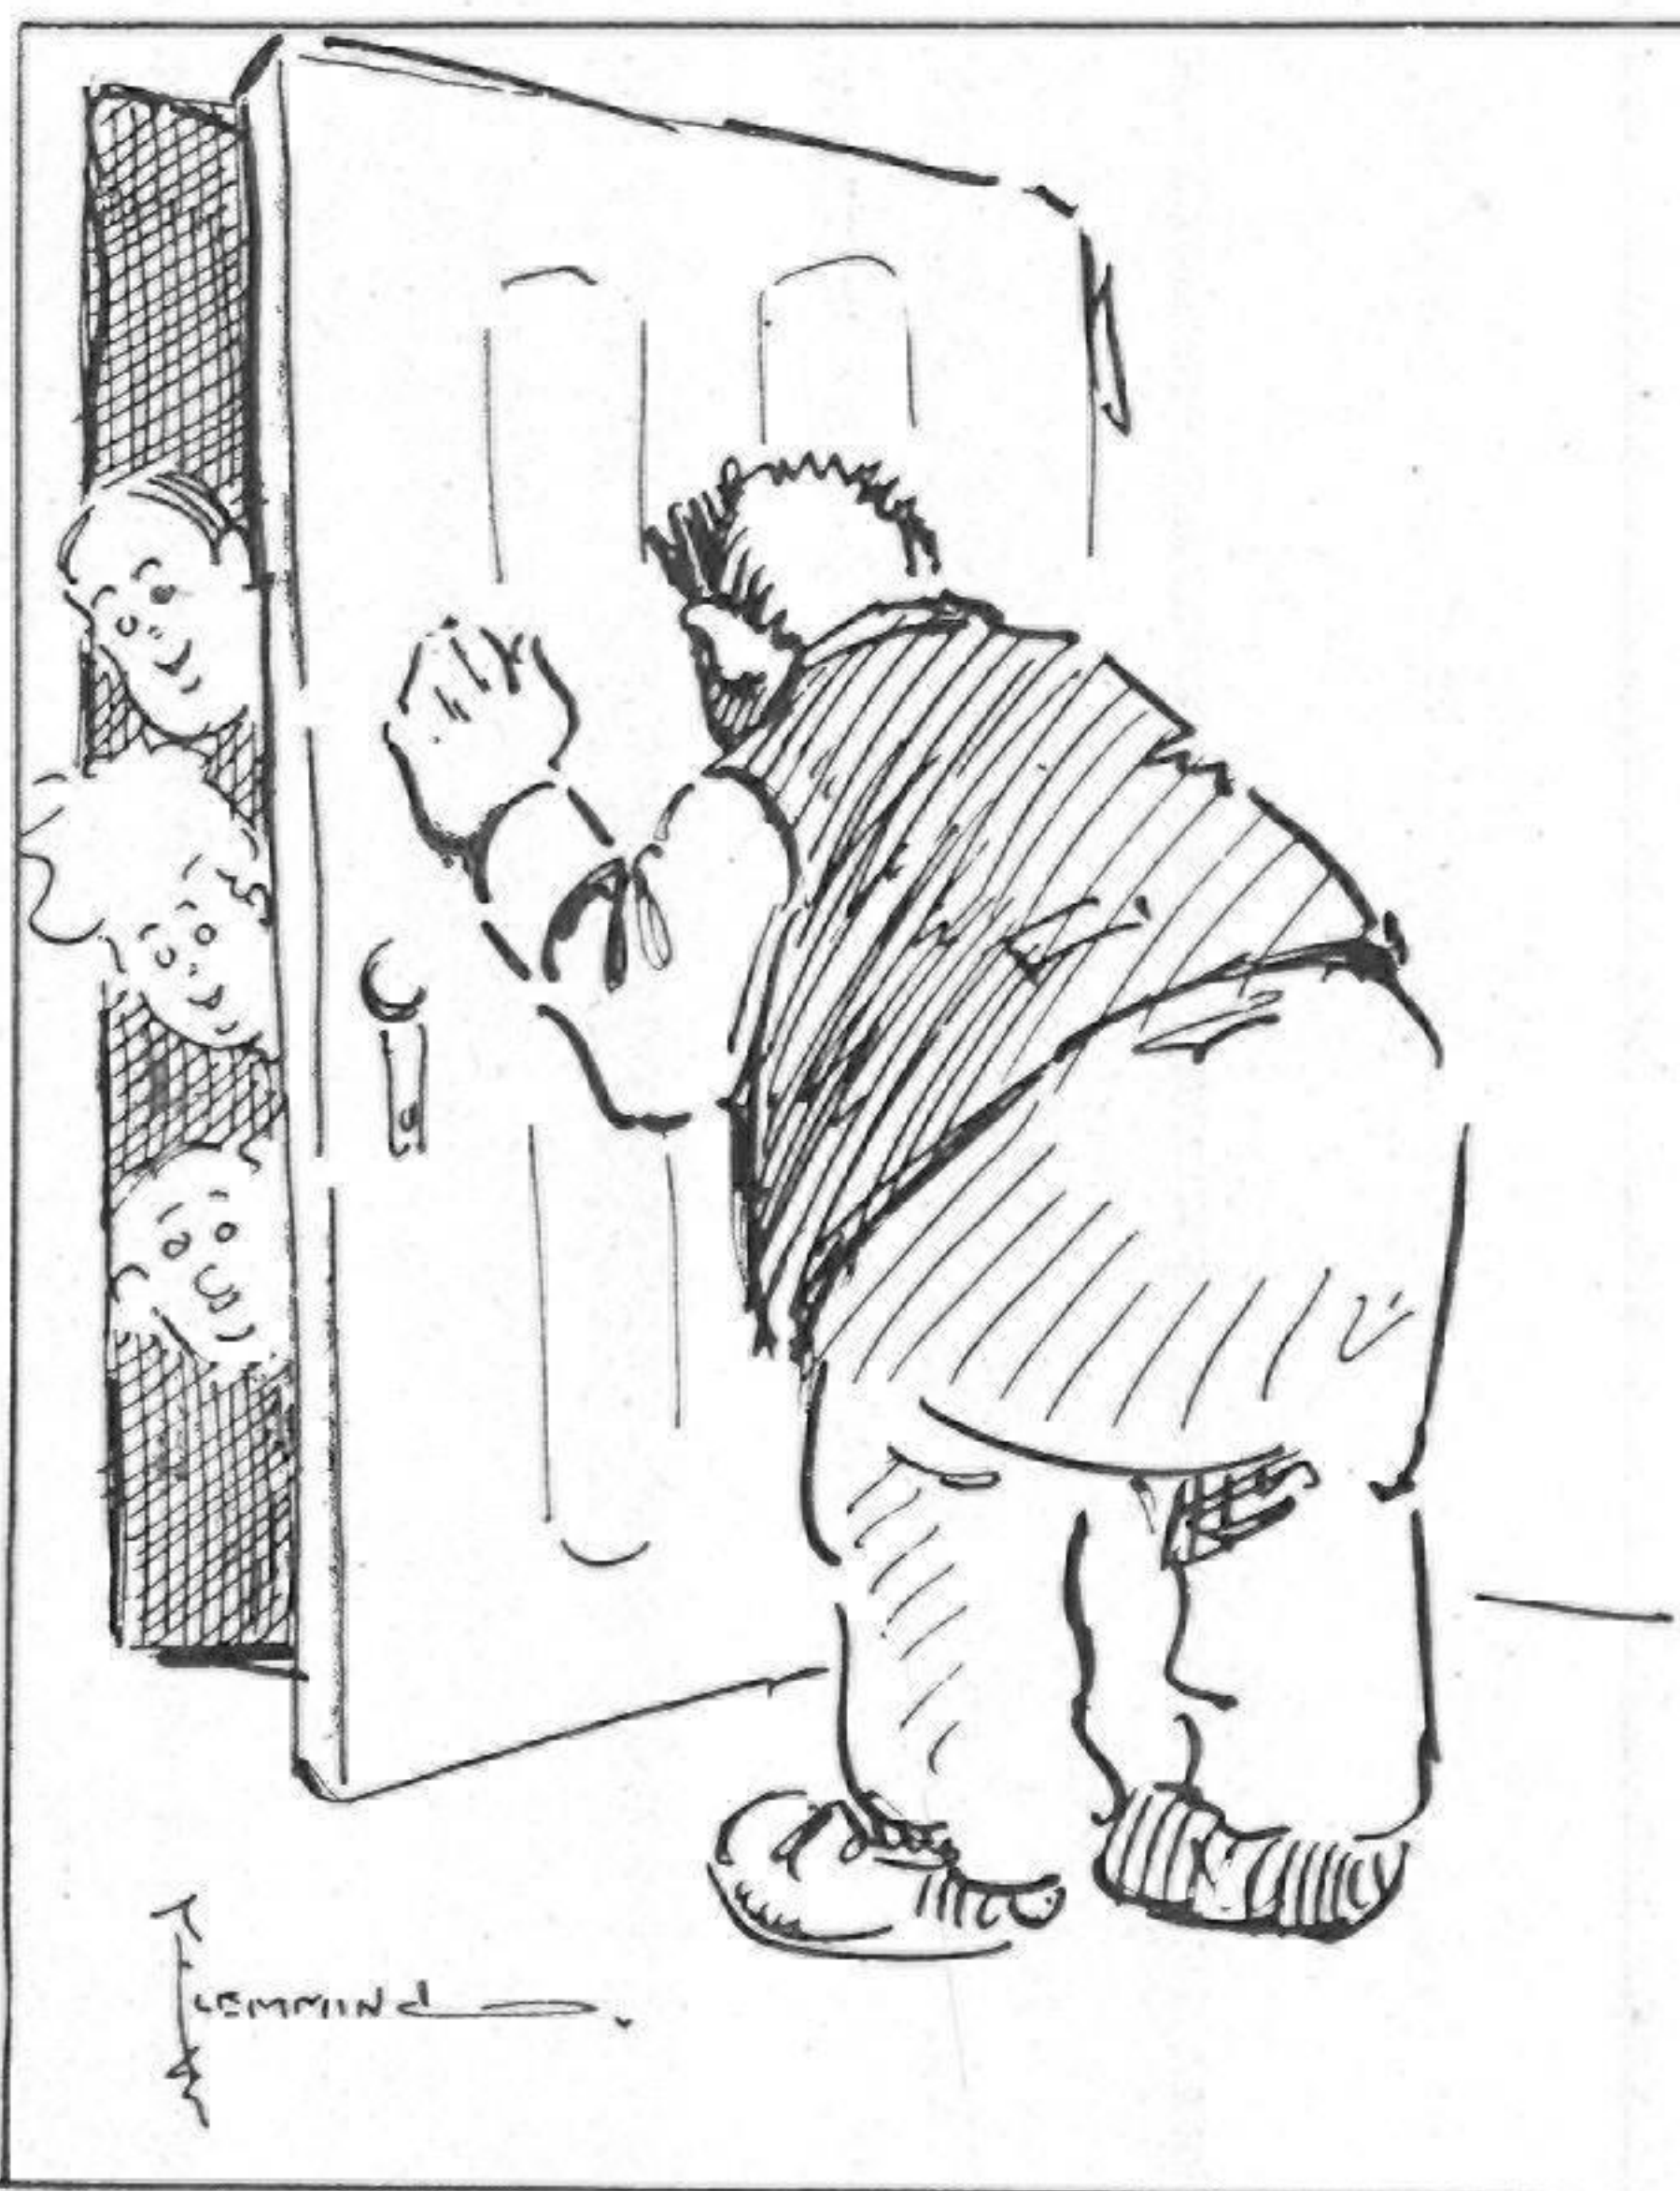

THE GRIND.

He fairly eats his calculus,
He lives on weighty books;
He's great on Greek and psyc and chem,
But he's mighty short on looks.

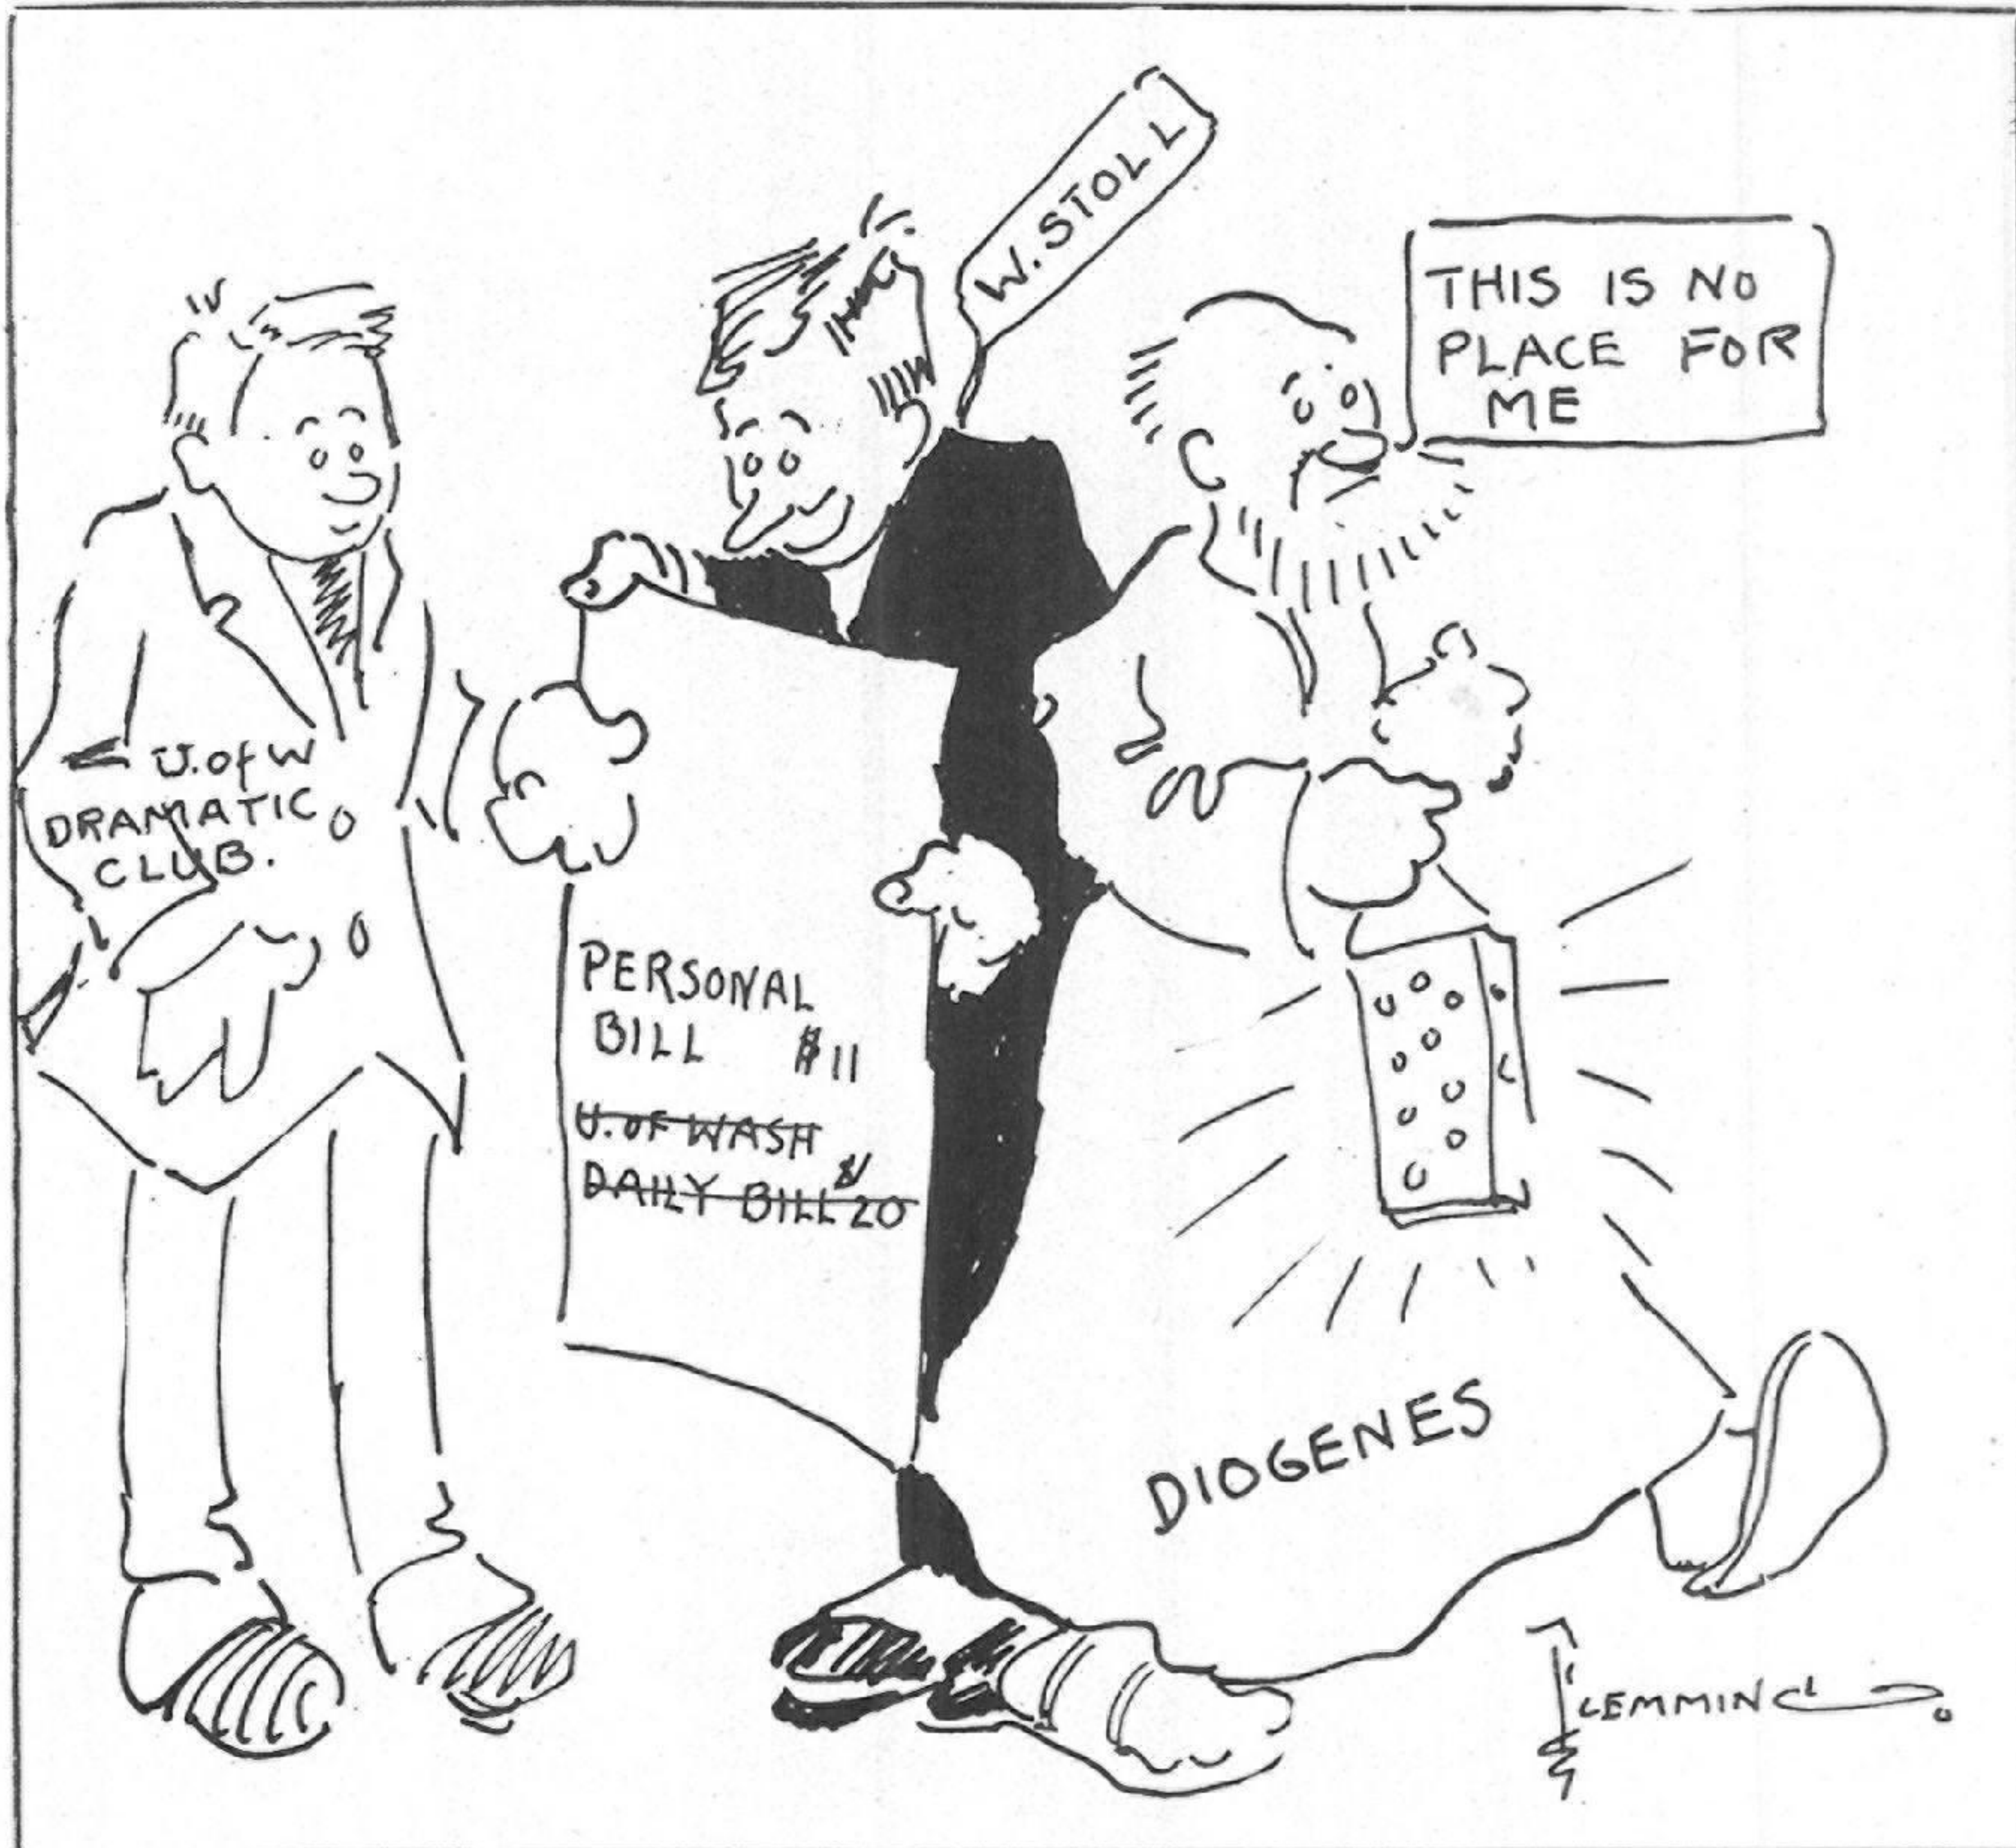

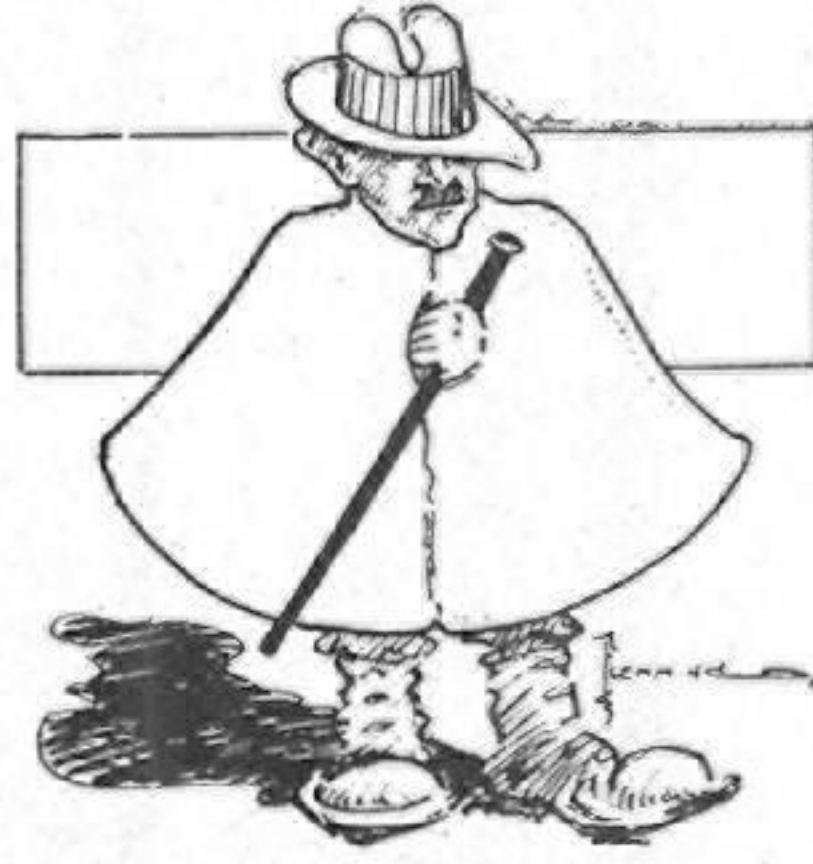

THE SPORT.

Inspect, dear friend, the college sport,
Who each whimlet of fashion observes;
It's true, he is giving the co-eds a treat—
But, say, ain't it hell on your nerves?

PROF. FREDERICK ARTHUR OSBORN

PUZZLE IN HIGH FINANCE.

Bankrupt club has $11 assets. Liabilities—"Daily," $20; Stoll, $11.
Which bill did they pay?

One university commons. When last seen, was slowly traveling towards Mars. Finder return to Roy D. Pinkerton, ex-editor, and get cussed.

For the benefit of those who did not read the One Thousand and One garbled interviews of The Daily, we would explain that the Commons was a proposed eating house where all could drink their soup in tune.

THE NEW RUSHING RULES

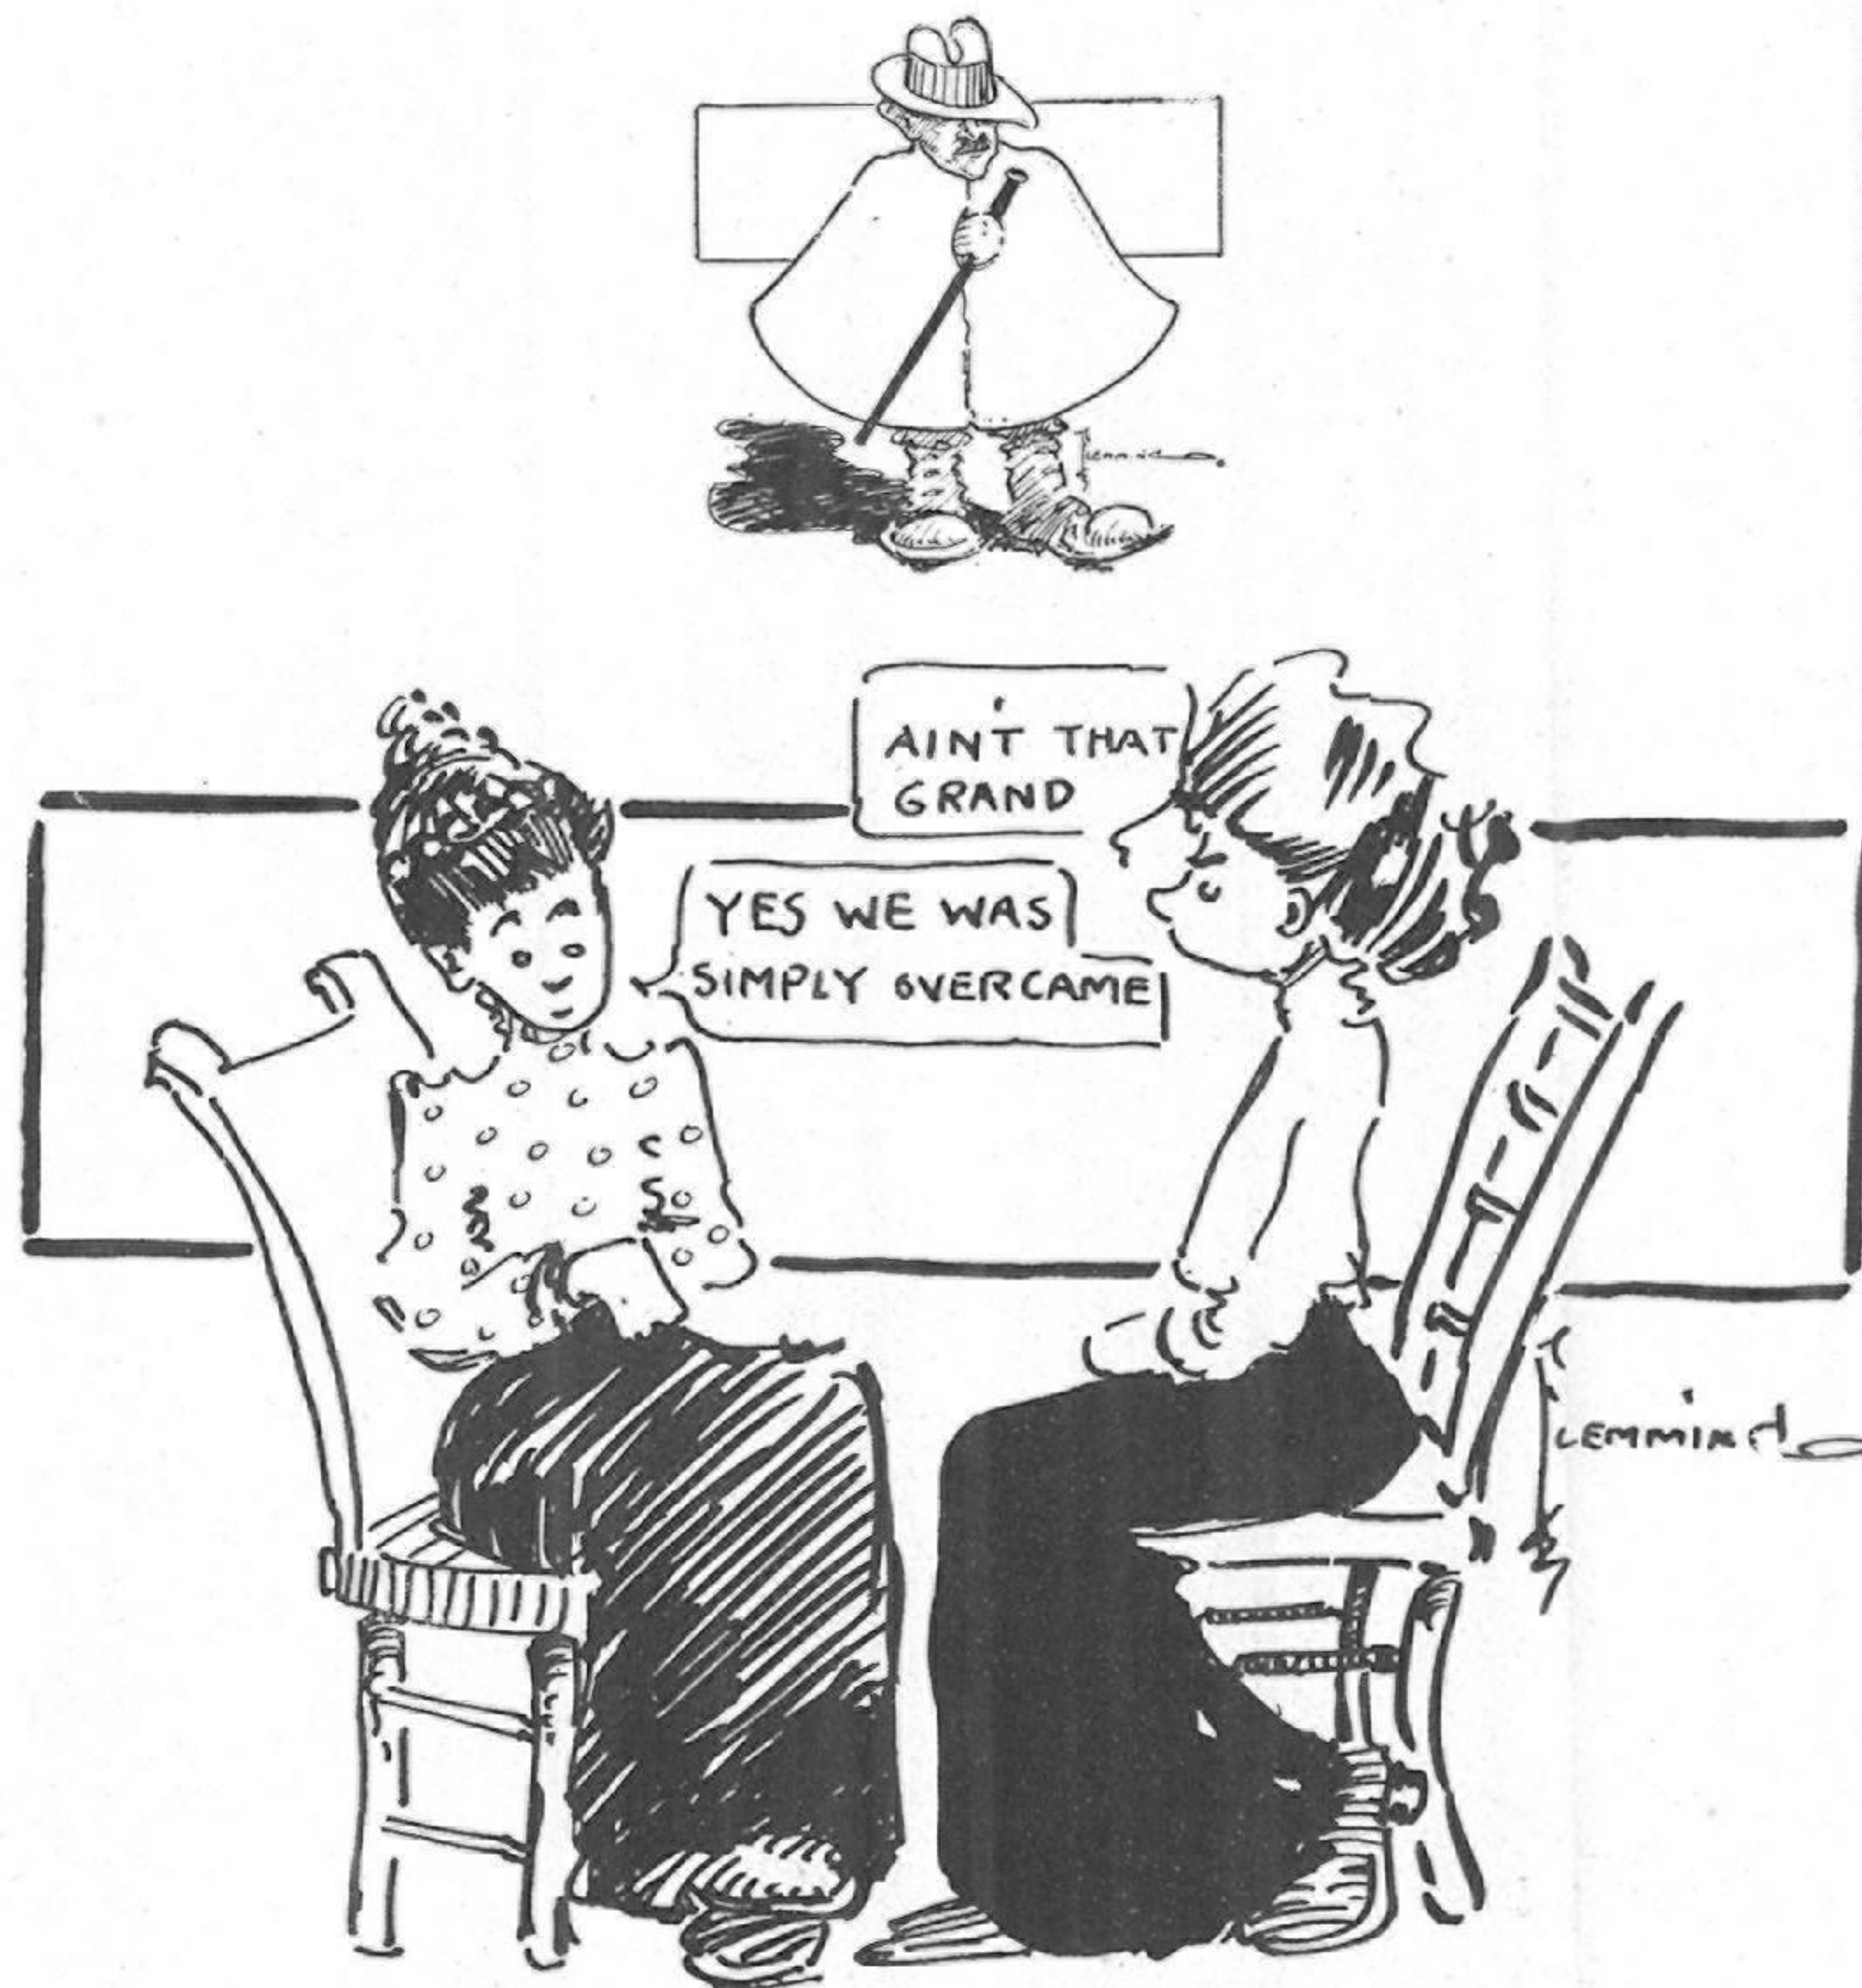

RALPH SWAZEY AT HOME

HINTS TO THE FRESHMEN NO. 37—

If you are asked a question, always have an answer ready. Anything will do. The following is an excellent example:

Question: When was the battle of Leipsig fought?

Answer: Oh, my, yes! Although the author seems to be rather vague on this subject. From my outside reading, however, I am certain that Congress is not in session.

FINE KIDS.

KAPPA—My, how well you have your freshmen trained!

PI PHI—Yes, we've got them so they don't even criticize our grammar in company no more.

Ernie Wells has just narrated one of his inimitable stories.

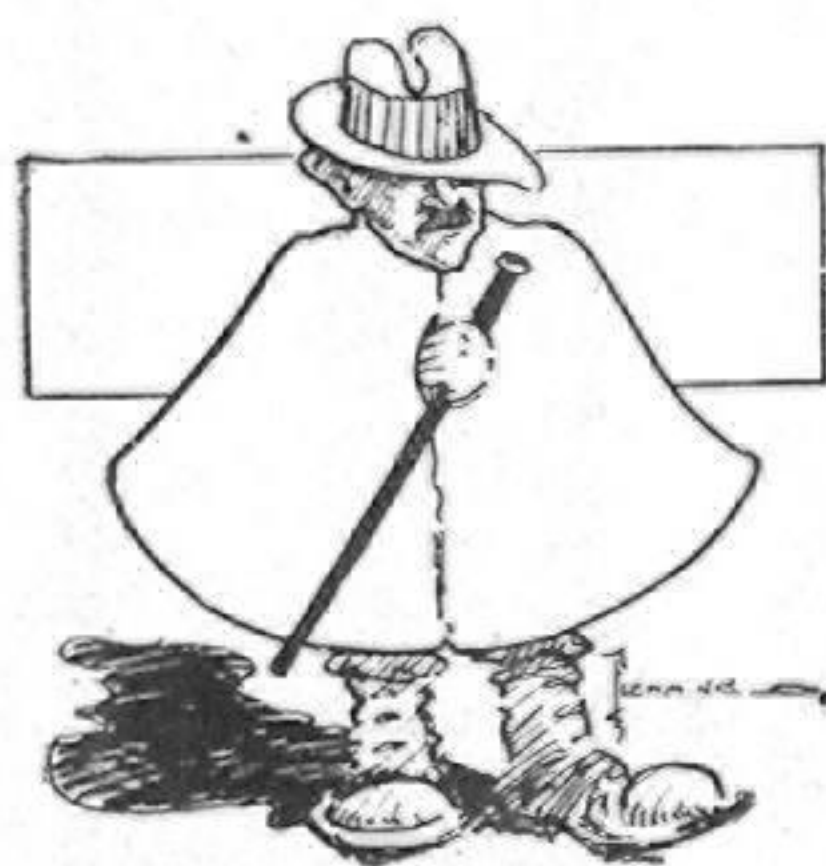

JOE HARRISON—Isn't that one of Trevor Kincaid's yarns?

WELLS—Not yet.

STUDENT'S PROBLEM NO. 16,748—

If you say the car was late, you're a liar. If you don't, you're a loafer.

Take care of the pennies and the dollars will be taken care of by the bookstore.

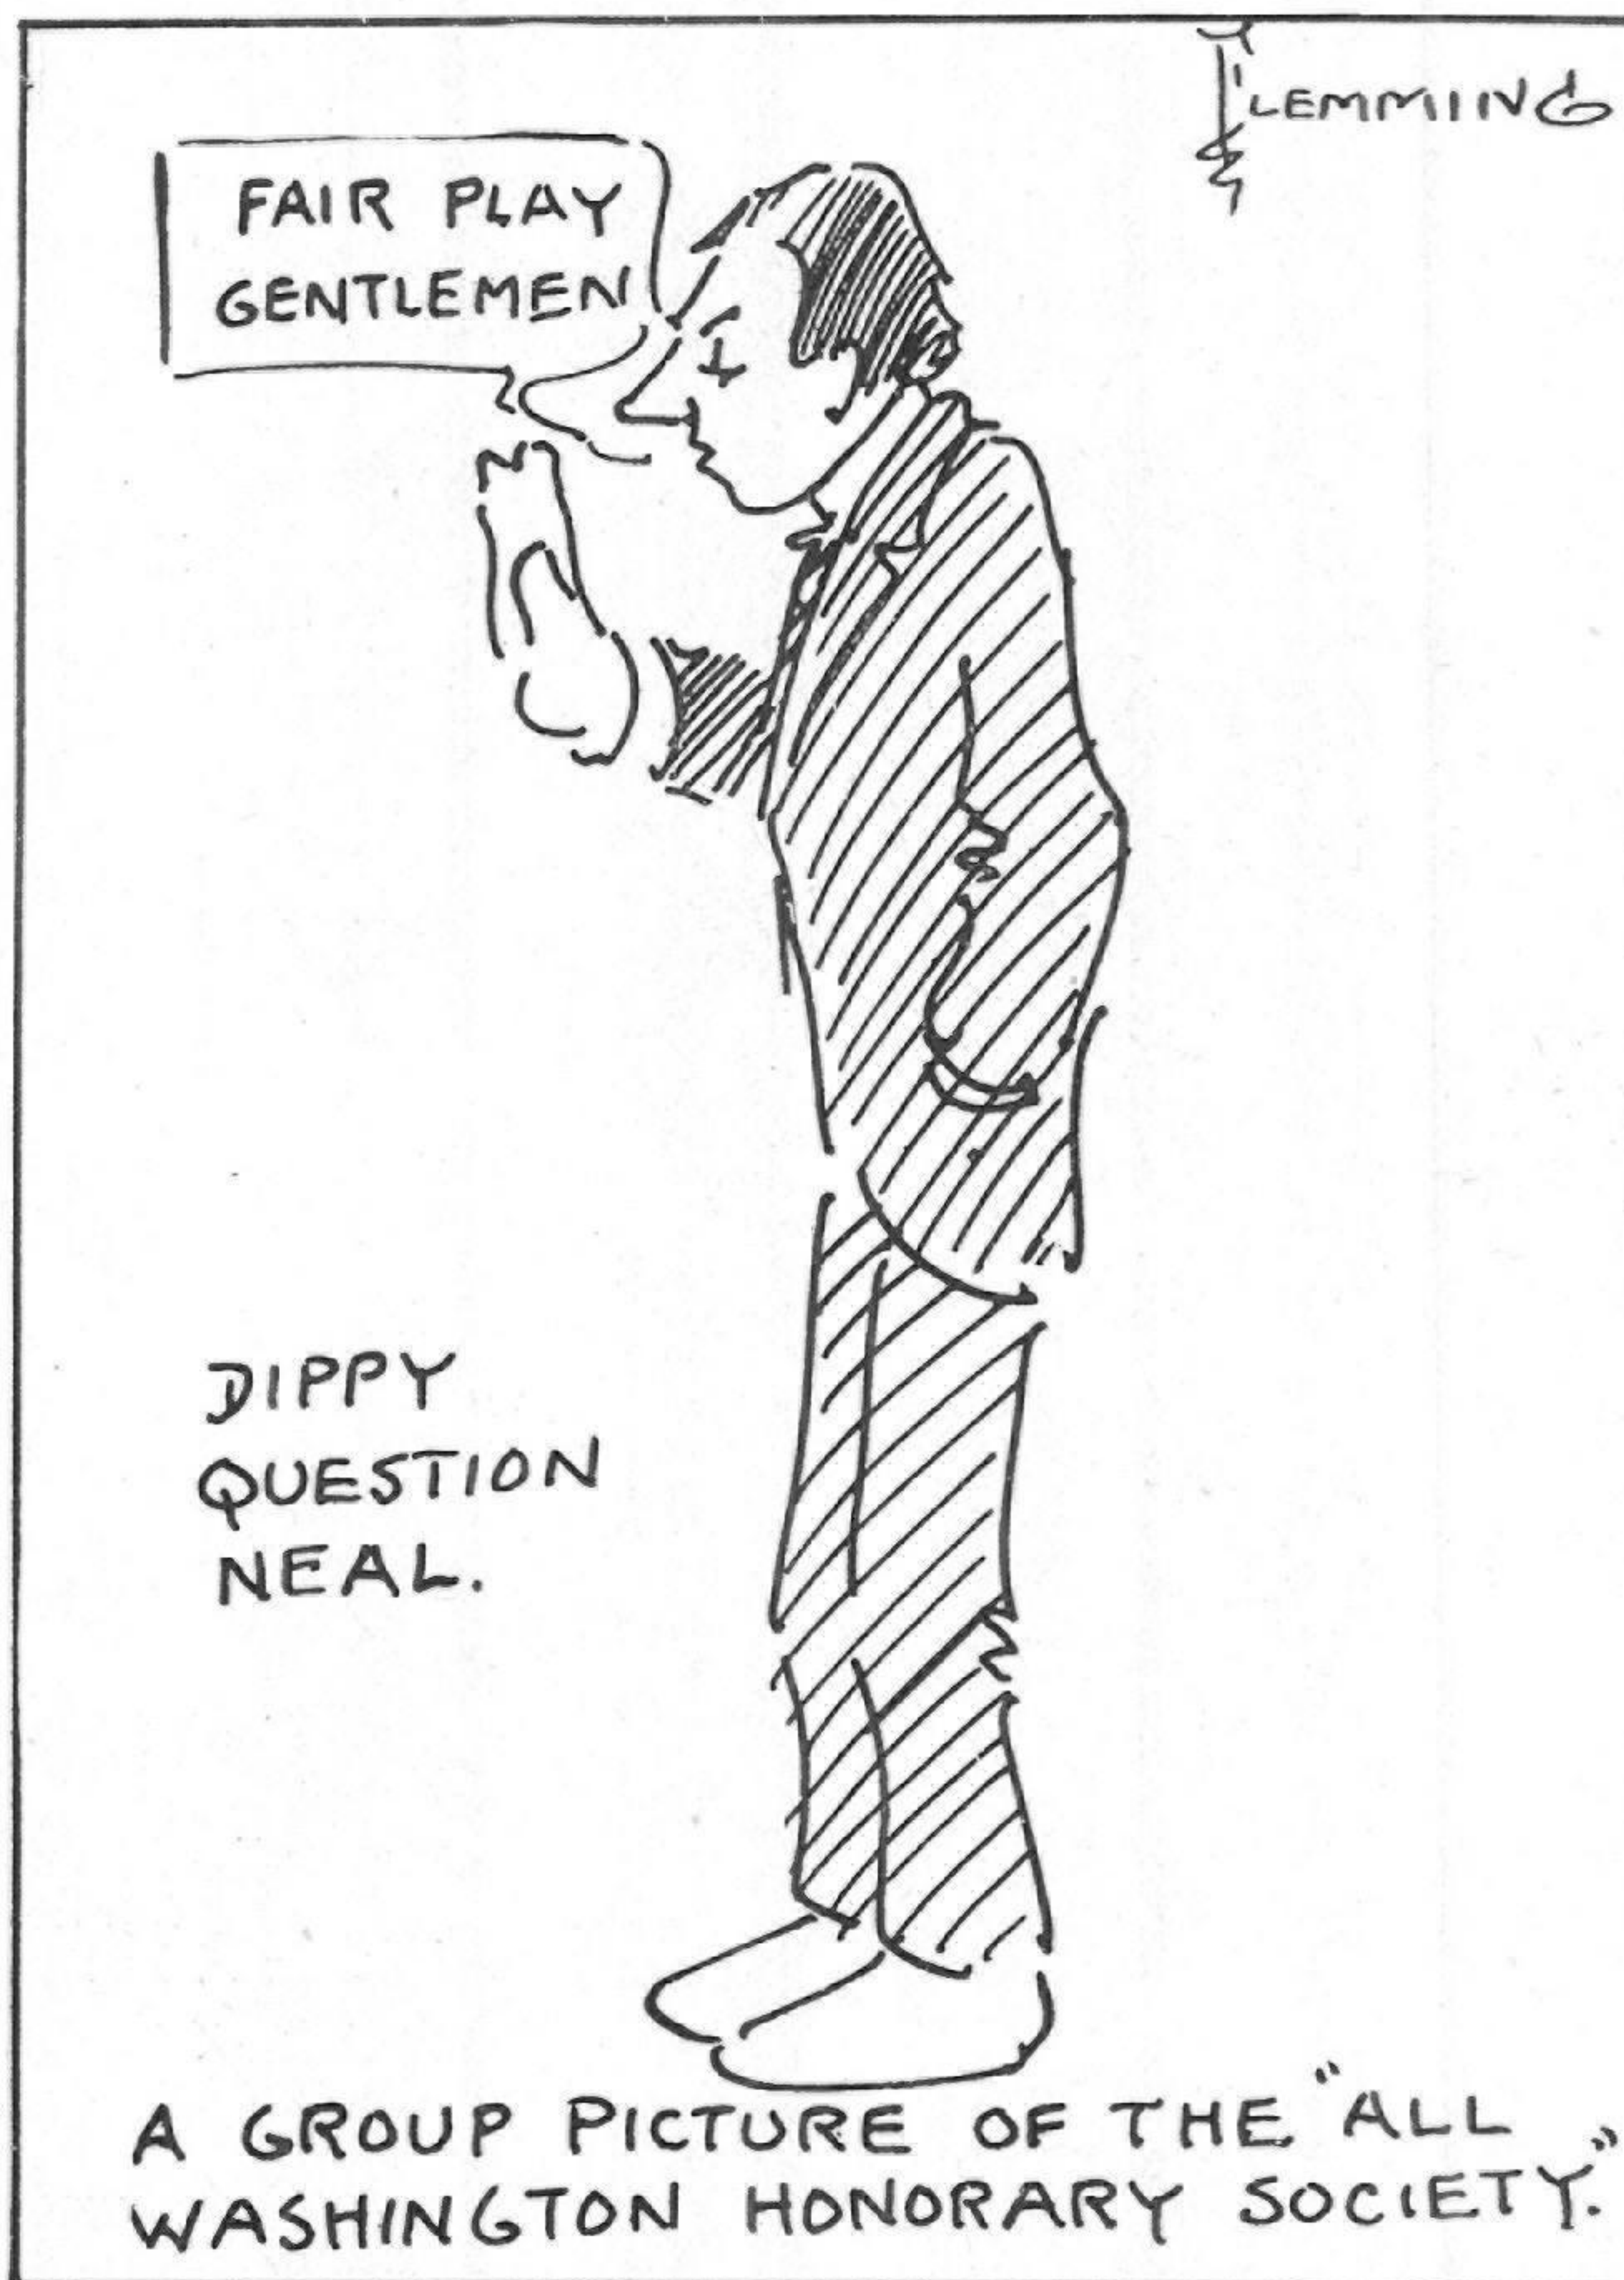

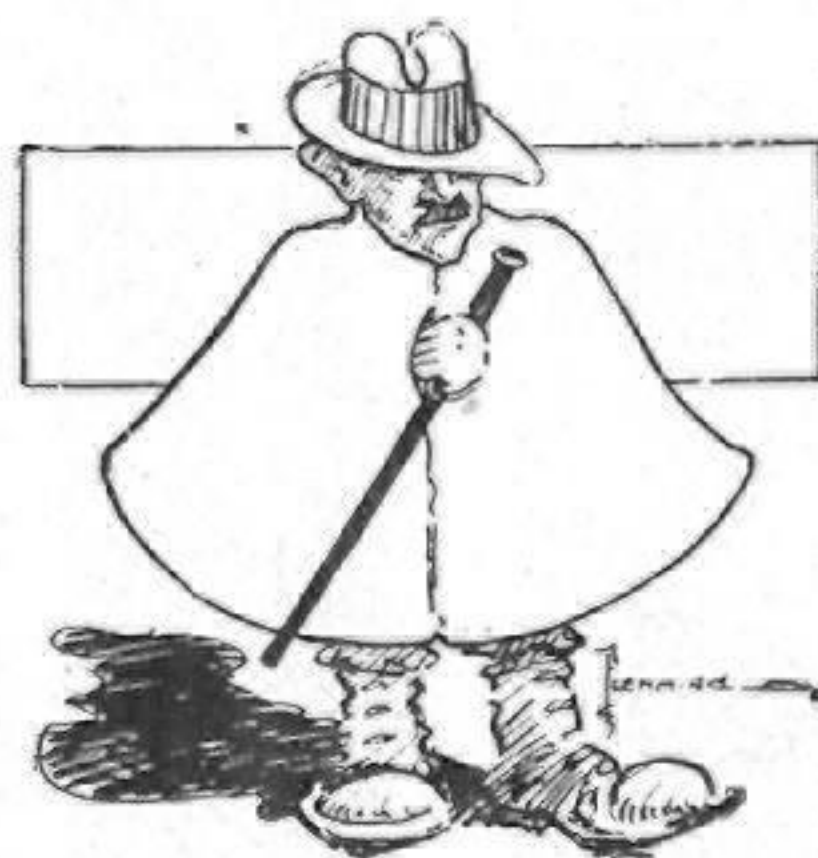

OUT-HERODING JANPOLSKI.

FIRST STUDE—I want you to meet Miss Greenlee. Just back from the Orient.

SECOND STUDE—Her first visit?

FIRST STUDE—Yes.

SECOND STUDE—Well, if it's the same to you, old man. I'll wait until she's through telling about it.

ENGINEER—That Arts man told me my new shoes were obstreperous.

MATH. SUARK—Is that a compliment?

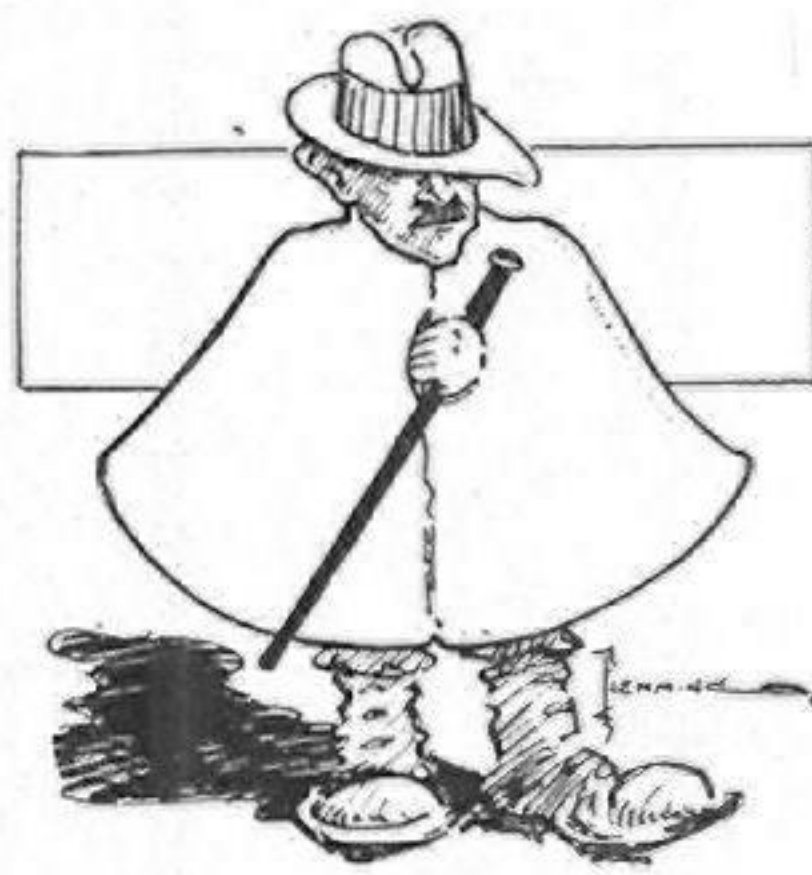

ENGINEER—I don't know. I'm going after a dictionary now to find out.

WALT BEEBE—How do you keep track of your cons?

BILL MCKAY—I use a card index system.

STUDENT'S PROBLEM NO. 921,867,204—

If you let her wear that pin, you're easy. If you don't, you're a grouch.

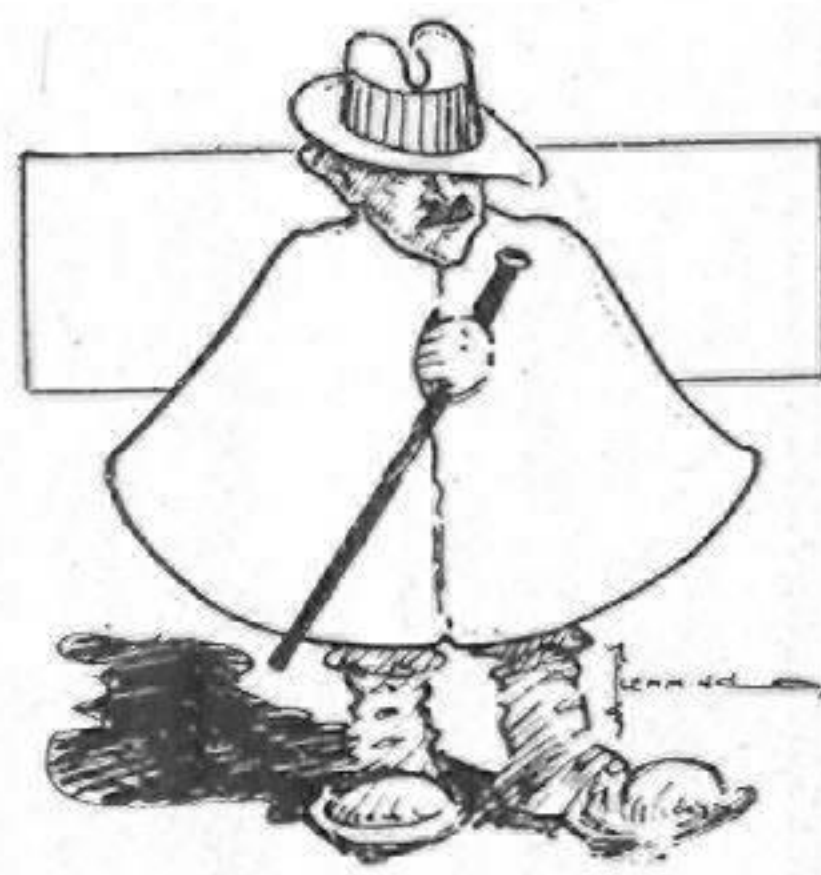

Maybe some one in the rural districts can tell us where the Stenroh money is.

Statistics of the 89,437 American students who flunked last year show that 89,432 had sore eyes, 3,456 had unfair professors, 7,398 could have passed if they wanted to, but they didn't, and the remaining 67 were going to leave college anyway.

HINTS TO THE FRESHMEN NO. 90,003,500,038—

If you can coach a track team to the cellar championship, you are well fitted to take charge of rowing as well.

Yawn and the stude yawns with you; think and you think alone!

HINTS TO THE FRESHMEN NO. 4—

When a college correspondent needs copy for a down-town paper, it is better to buy a little green paint or red fire than to sit down and wait for something to happen.

HINTS TO THE FRESHMEN NO. 2,975--

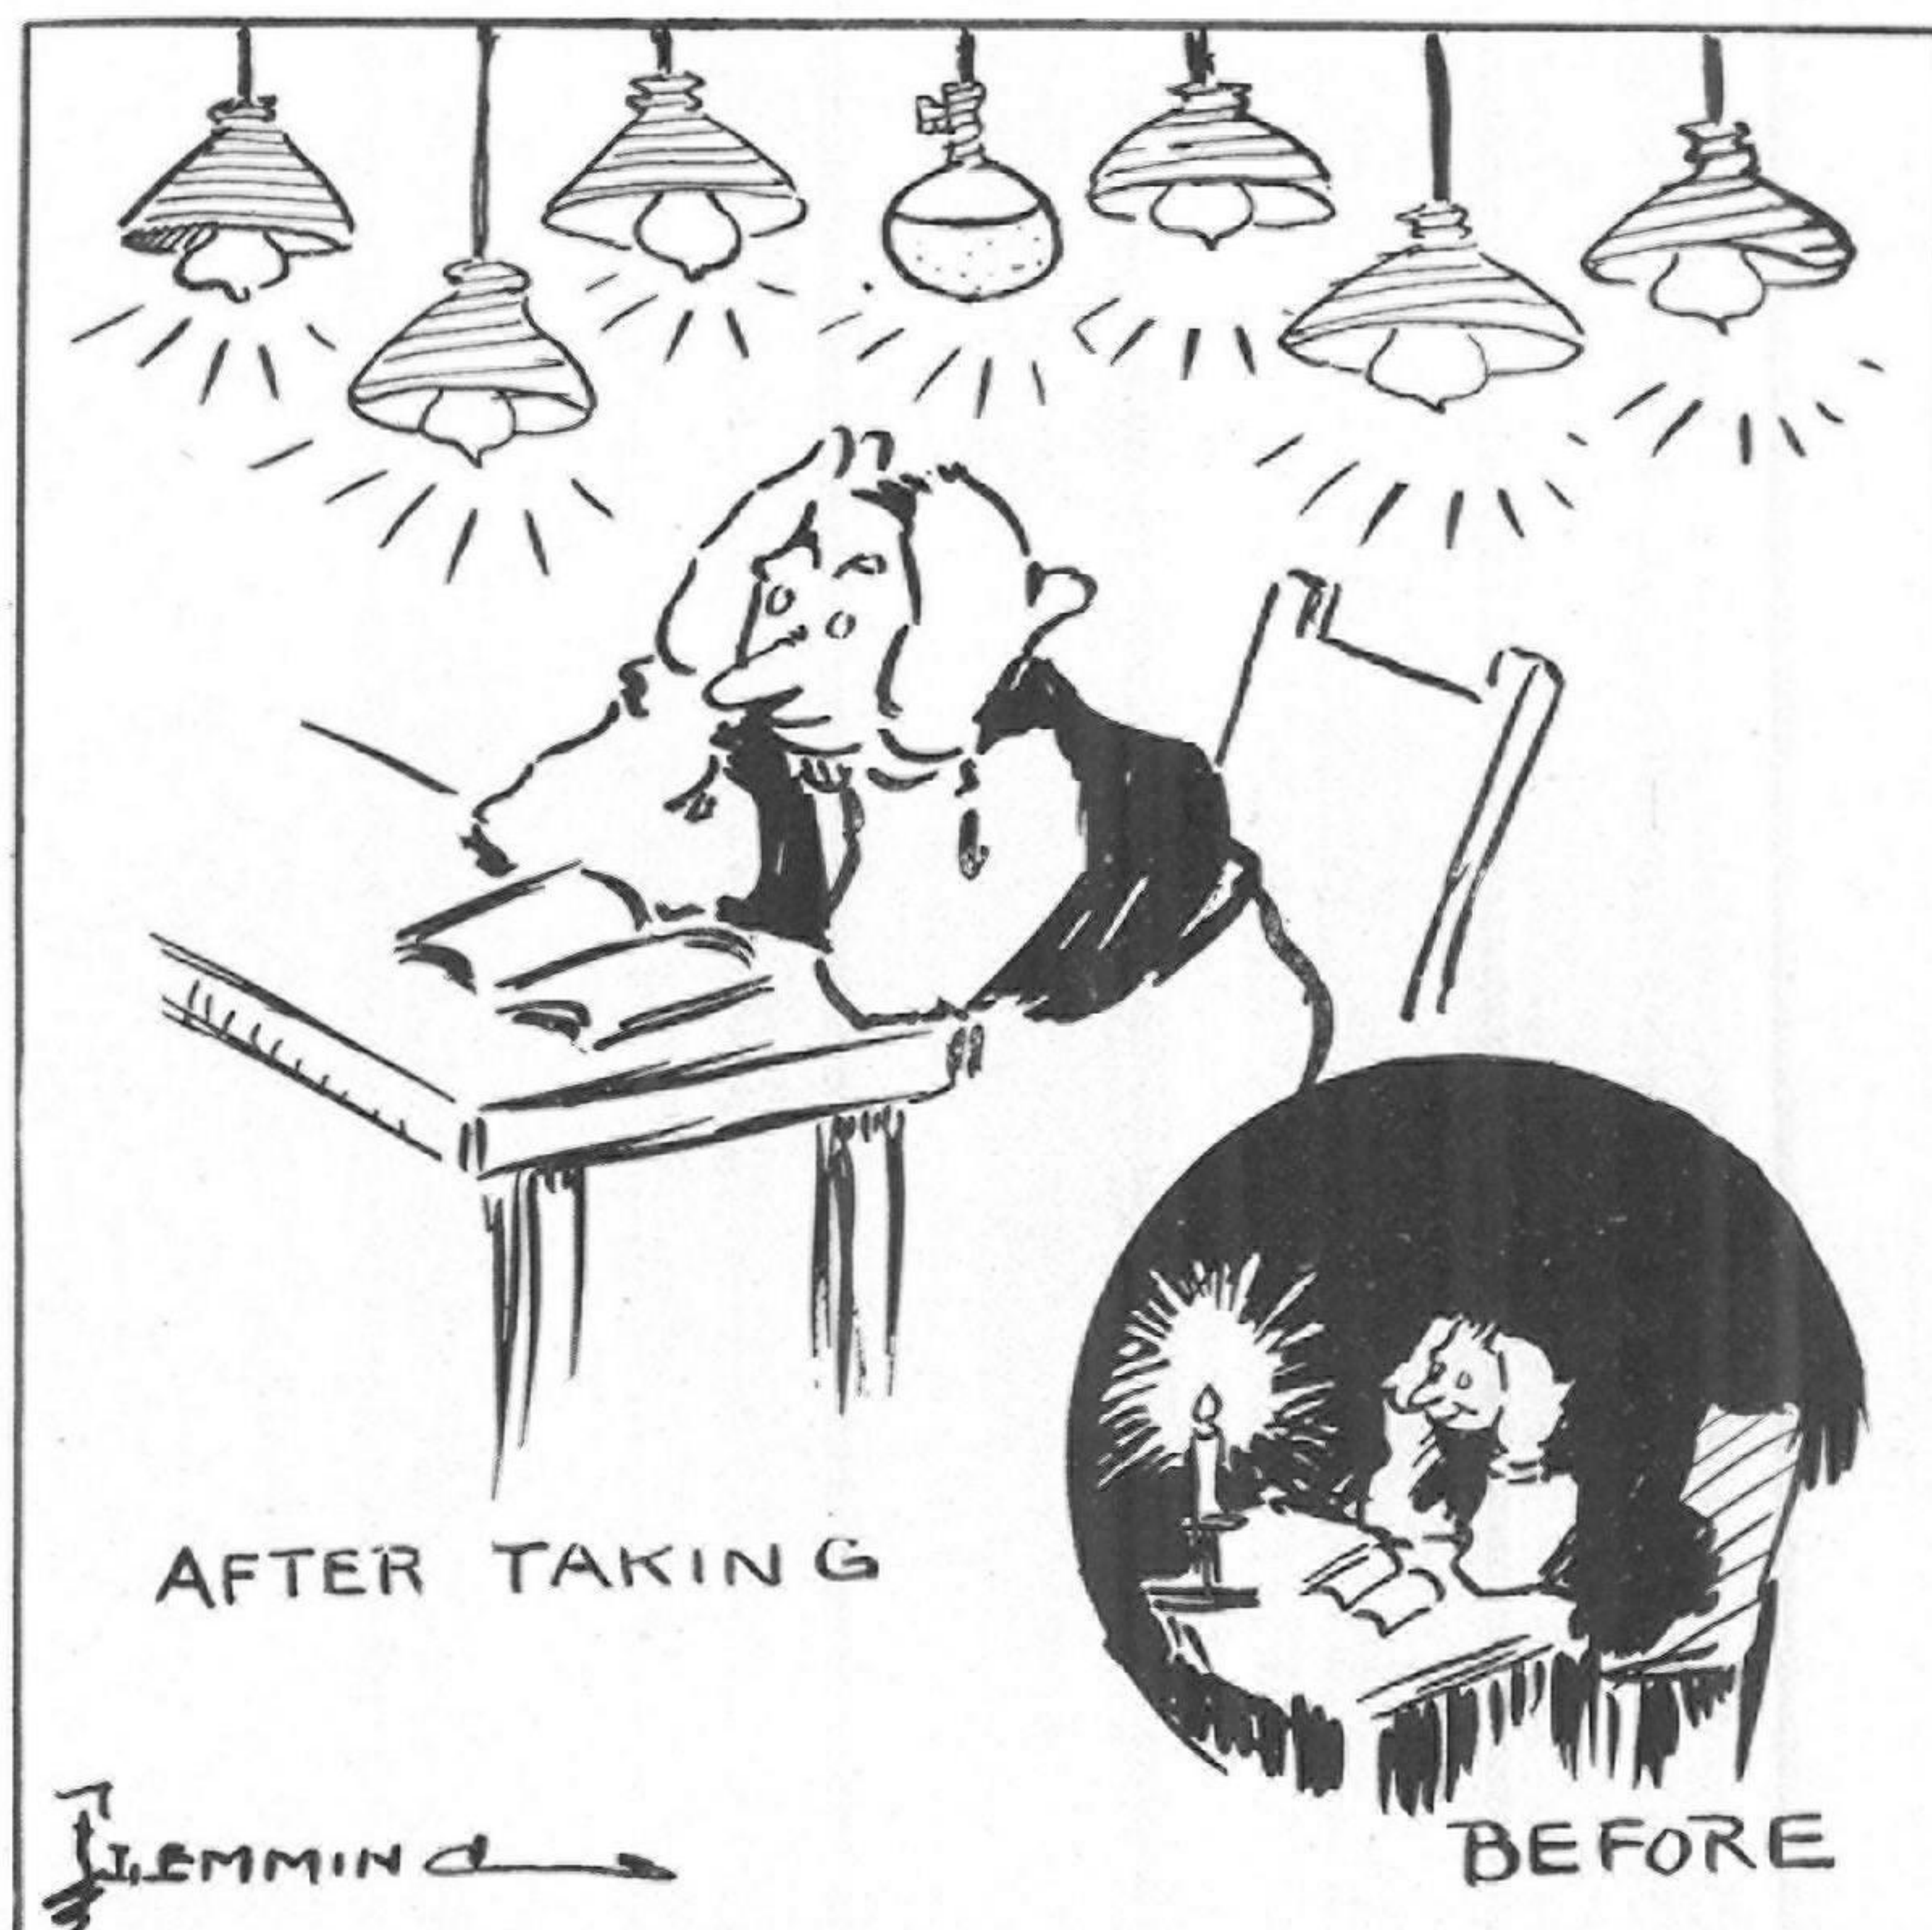

If you belong to the cadet corps and have any stray medals won in grammar-school spelling matches, it is quite proper to display them on your uniform, especially if you are a captain.

STUDENT'S PROBLEM NO. 71—

If you laugh at a prof's joke, you're a sycophant. If you don't, you're flunked.

STUDENT'S PROBLEM NO. 461—

If you speak to a girl on the campus, you're a queener. If you don't, you're a Swazey.

She said she'd sing some songs for him,
And he was sore beset;
She meant it for a promise,
He took it for a threat.

LIKE SOME MORE OF US.

DR. SAVERY—Mr. Prater, the subject of the lecture this morning is the "Future Life." You may tell us what you know about it.

PRATER—I'm not prepared.

Take care of the hours and Sylvia Wold will take care of the minutes.

And have you music at the "U"?
 I asked the stude offhand;
 "Well, no," he said, "Can't say we have;
 Just playing by the band."

SHE FELL FOR THIS.

SIGMA NU (after hearing a good story)—That's a good one; a little the best I've heard in a long time.

DELTA TAU DELTA—Yes, I told it to a Chi Omega the other evening and she laughed so hard she fell off my lap.

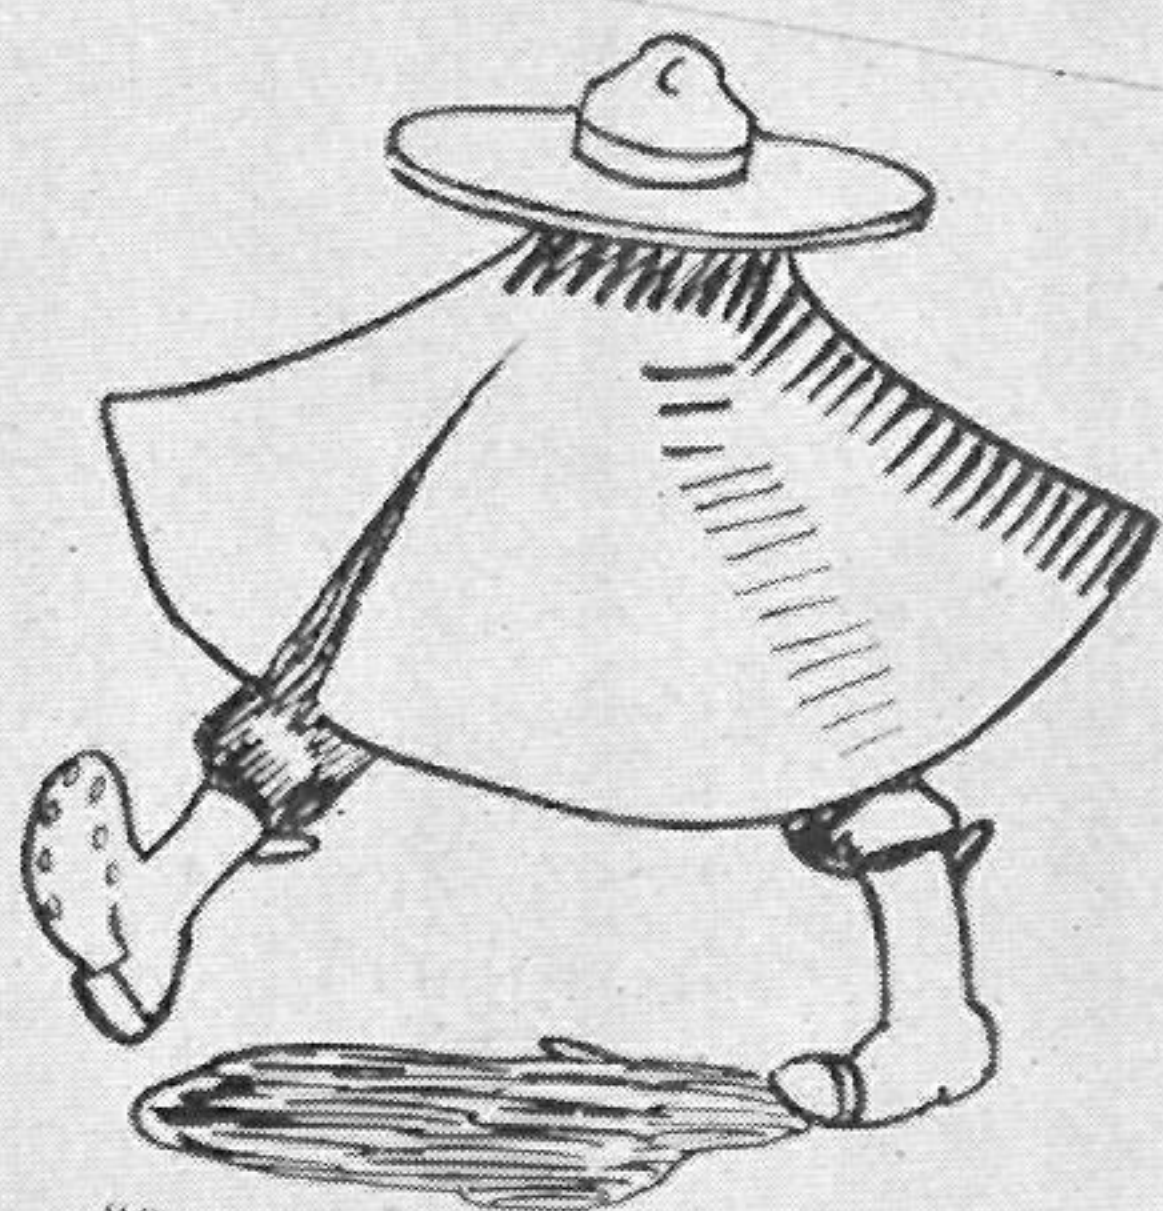

PORCINE.

PROFESSOR THORPE—Class, you have pearls before you this morning.
 (Lucien Kellogg grunts his approval from the back row.)

Problem in Military Science

If three weeks' service in the commissary department at Tampa during the Spanish-American War entitles one to wear a military cloak, a swagger and title of Captain, would the man who carries the General's horse be justified in calling himself an Assistant to the General?

THE EVOLUTION OF THE MILITARY DRILL.

What Cap. Lord Promised.

Rifle battalion; lots of free ammunition; duck hunting parties; week-end encampments; khaki trousers; military cape; sombrero; boots, red; and a kane.

What the Students Got.

Disagreeable compulsory drill; no ammunition; no parties; no cape; no sombrero; no boots; no kane.

THE DAILY STAFF.

The editor sits in his swivel chair,
And his eyes are wide with woe,
As he fumbles the paste-pot and raves his hair
There is nothing for him to do;
"More copy, more copy," the foreman bawls,
With a hoarse and horrid laugh —
And the editor slips from his chair and falls
As loudly he calls to the heartless walls:
"Lord, give me my Daily staff!"

There is nary a scribe in the hither room,
There is nary a stick of "dope";
There is nothing to shiver the endless gloom,
Not even a ray of hope.
But lonely and weeping and praying, too,
With a heart that is broken half —
The editor mourns for the workers few,
There is nothing at all for him else to do:
"Lord, give me my Daily staff!"

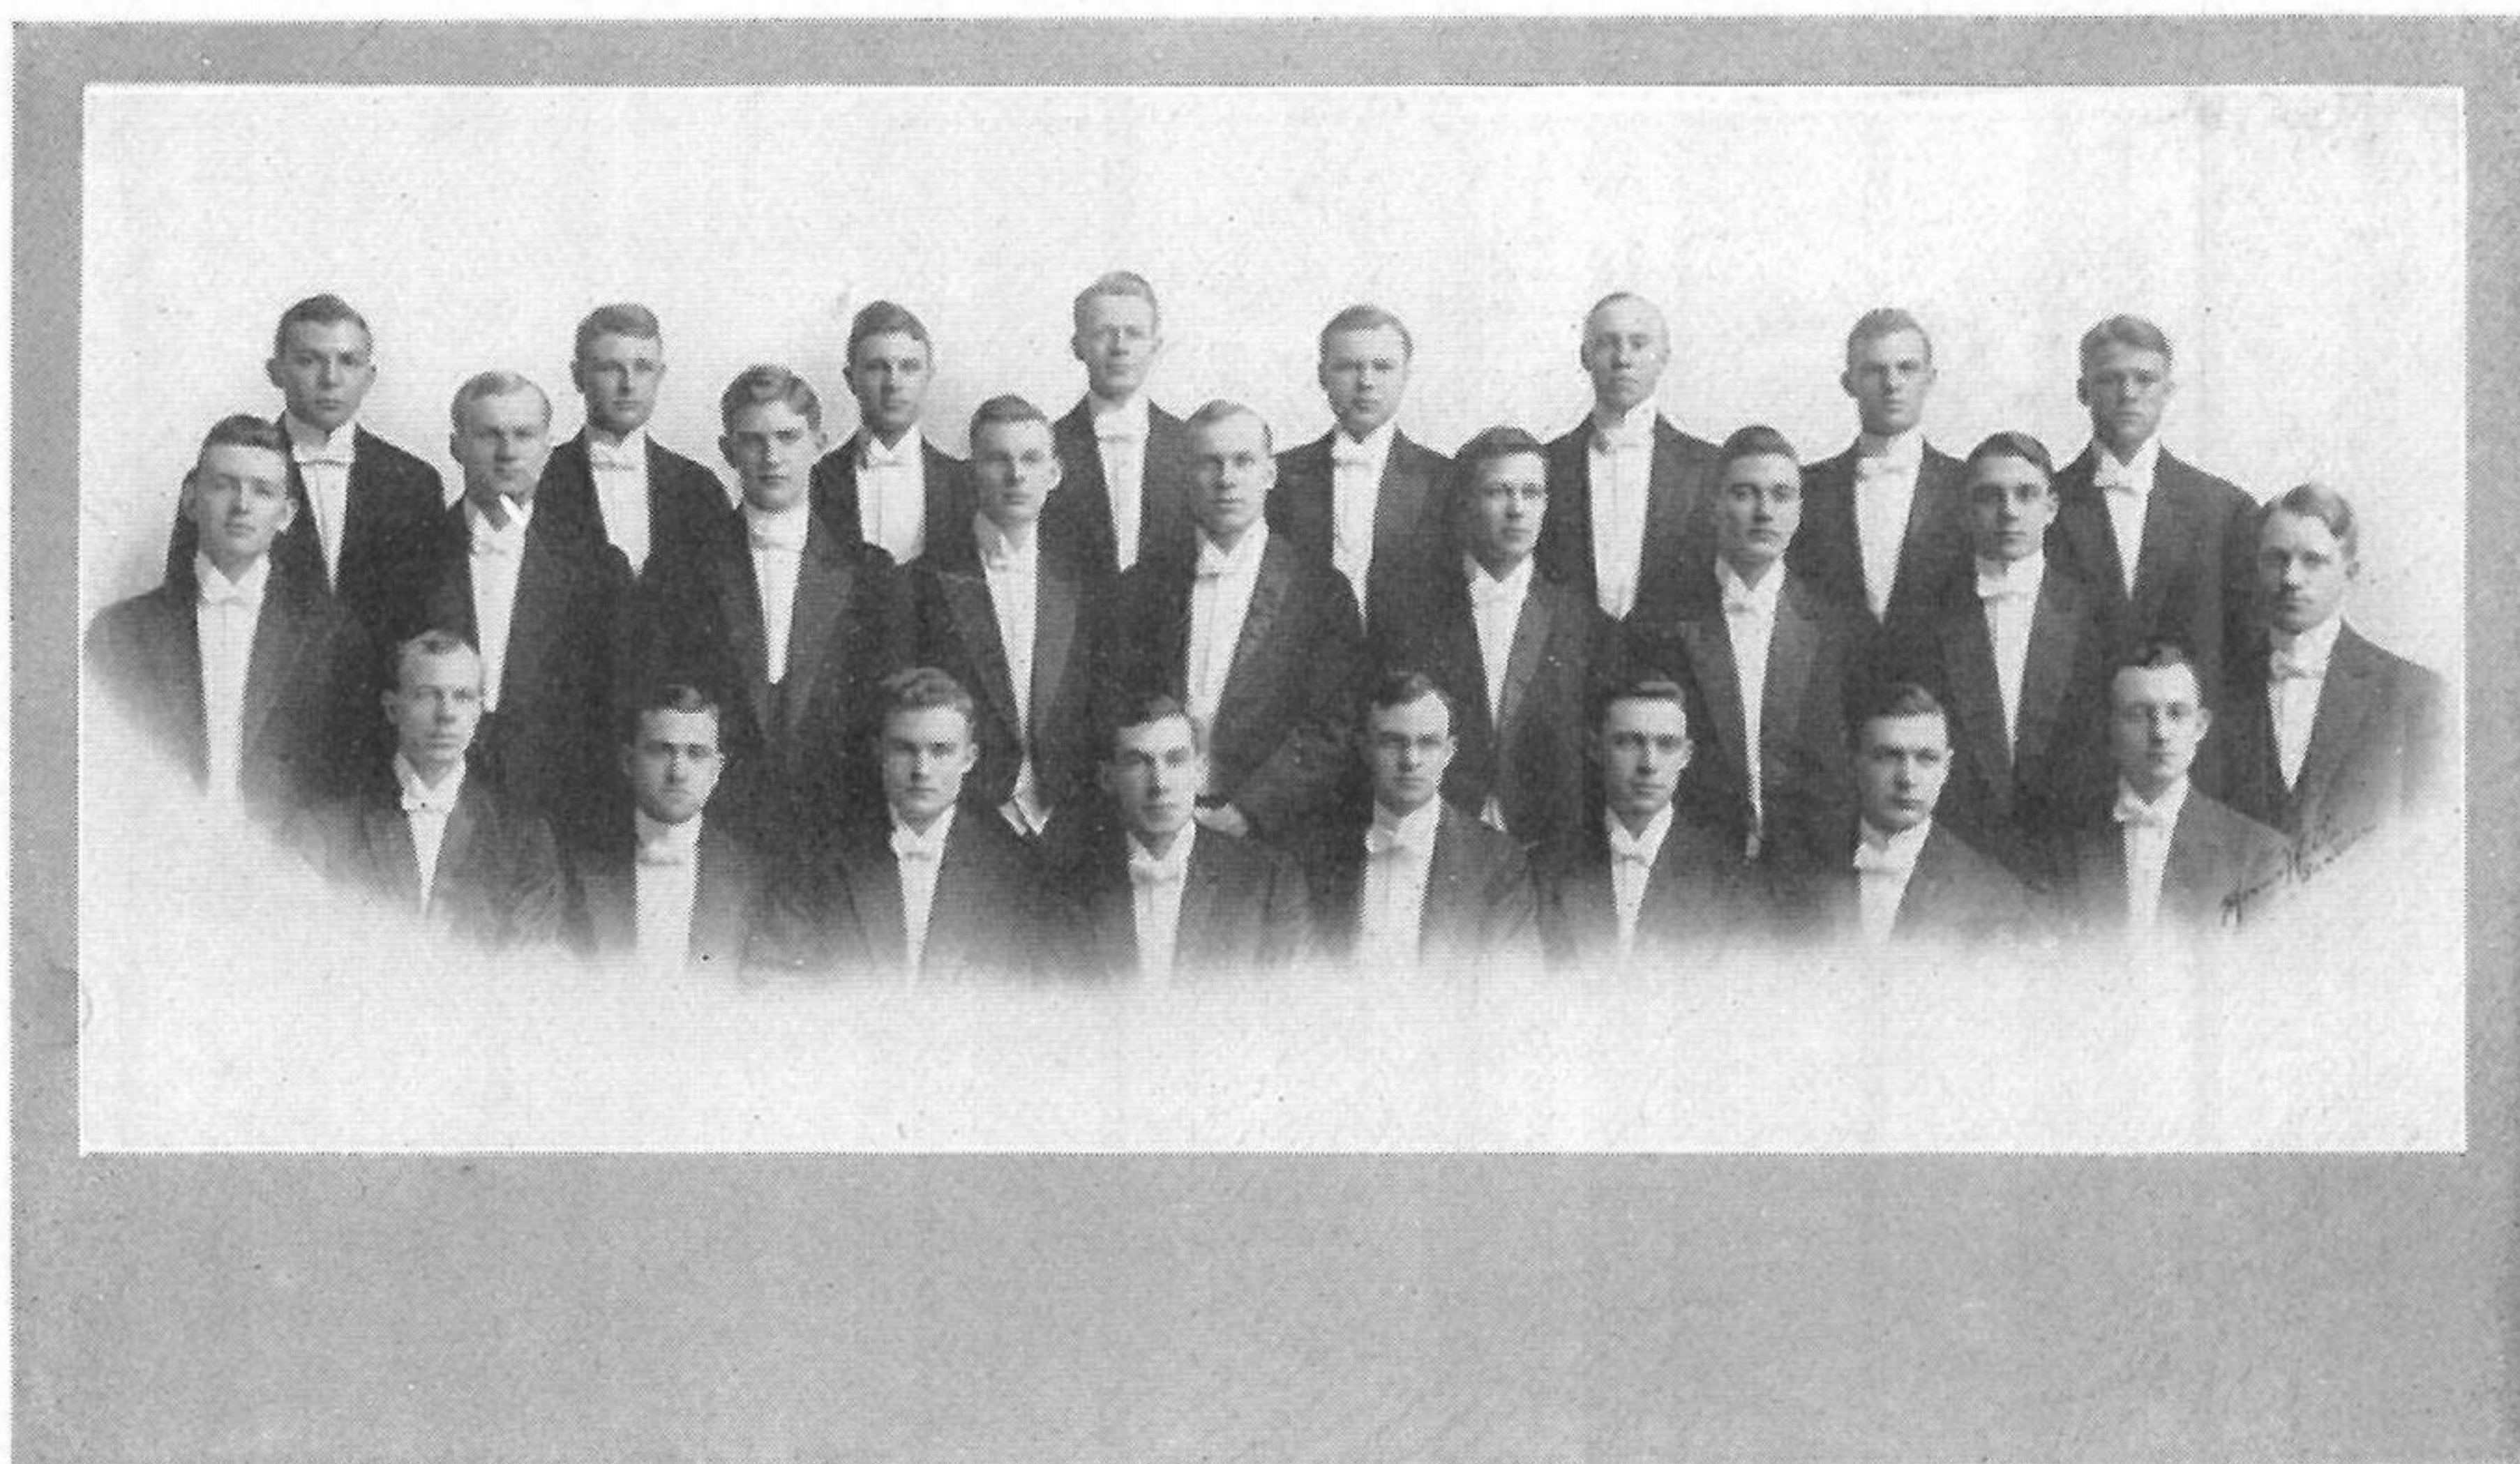

W. A. S. '12

HOW VERY UNLADYLIKE.

PROFESSOR SAVERY (to C. Biron Eagan in philosophy class)—Don't try to think, Clarence. Just use your woman's intuition.

JUGGLING HIS METAPHORS.

PROFESSOR THORPE (to advanced journalism class)—When you become editors, I want you to sit in your watchtower and hold your ear to the ground.

The Mystery of the Dress Suits

PICK OUT YOURS.

Last Row—No. 2 borrowed from the Phi Gams (spotted when returned); No. 4, Chicago Misfit Parlors; No. 8—this is his own ($60).

Middle Row—Nos. 1 and 7 borrowed from the Phi Delts (return at once); No. 2 formerly owned by Centralia's constable; No. 3 swiped at Whitman; No. 4 imported especially from Broadway; No. 6, lucky it wasn't a full-length; overalls wouldn't match the rest of the picture.

Front Row—No. 3, papa's; No. 4 (not a dress suit; painted in by the engraver; No. 5, loaned for the occasion by Prof. Meany; No. 8—this may be his own, but we doubt it.

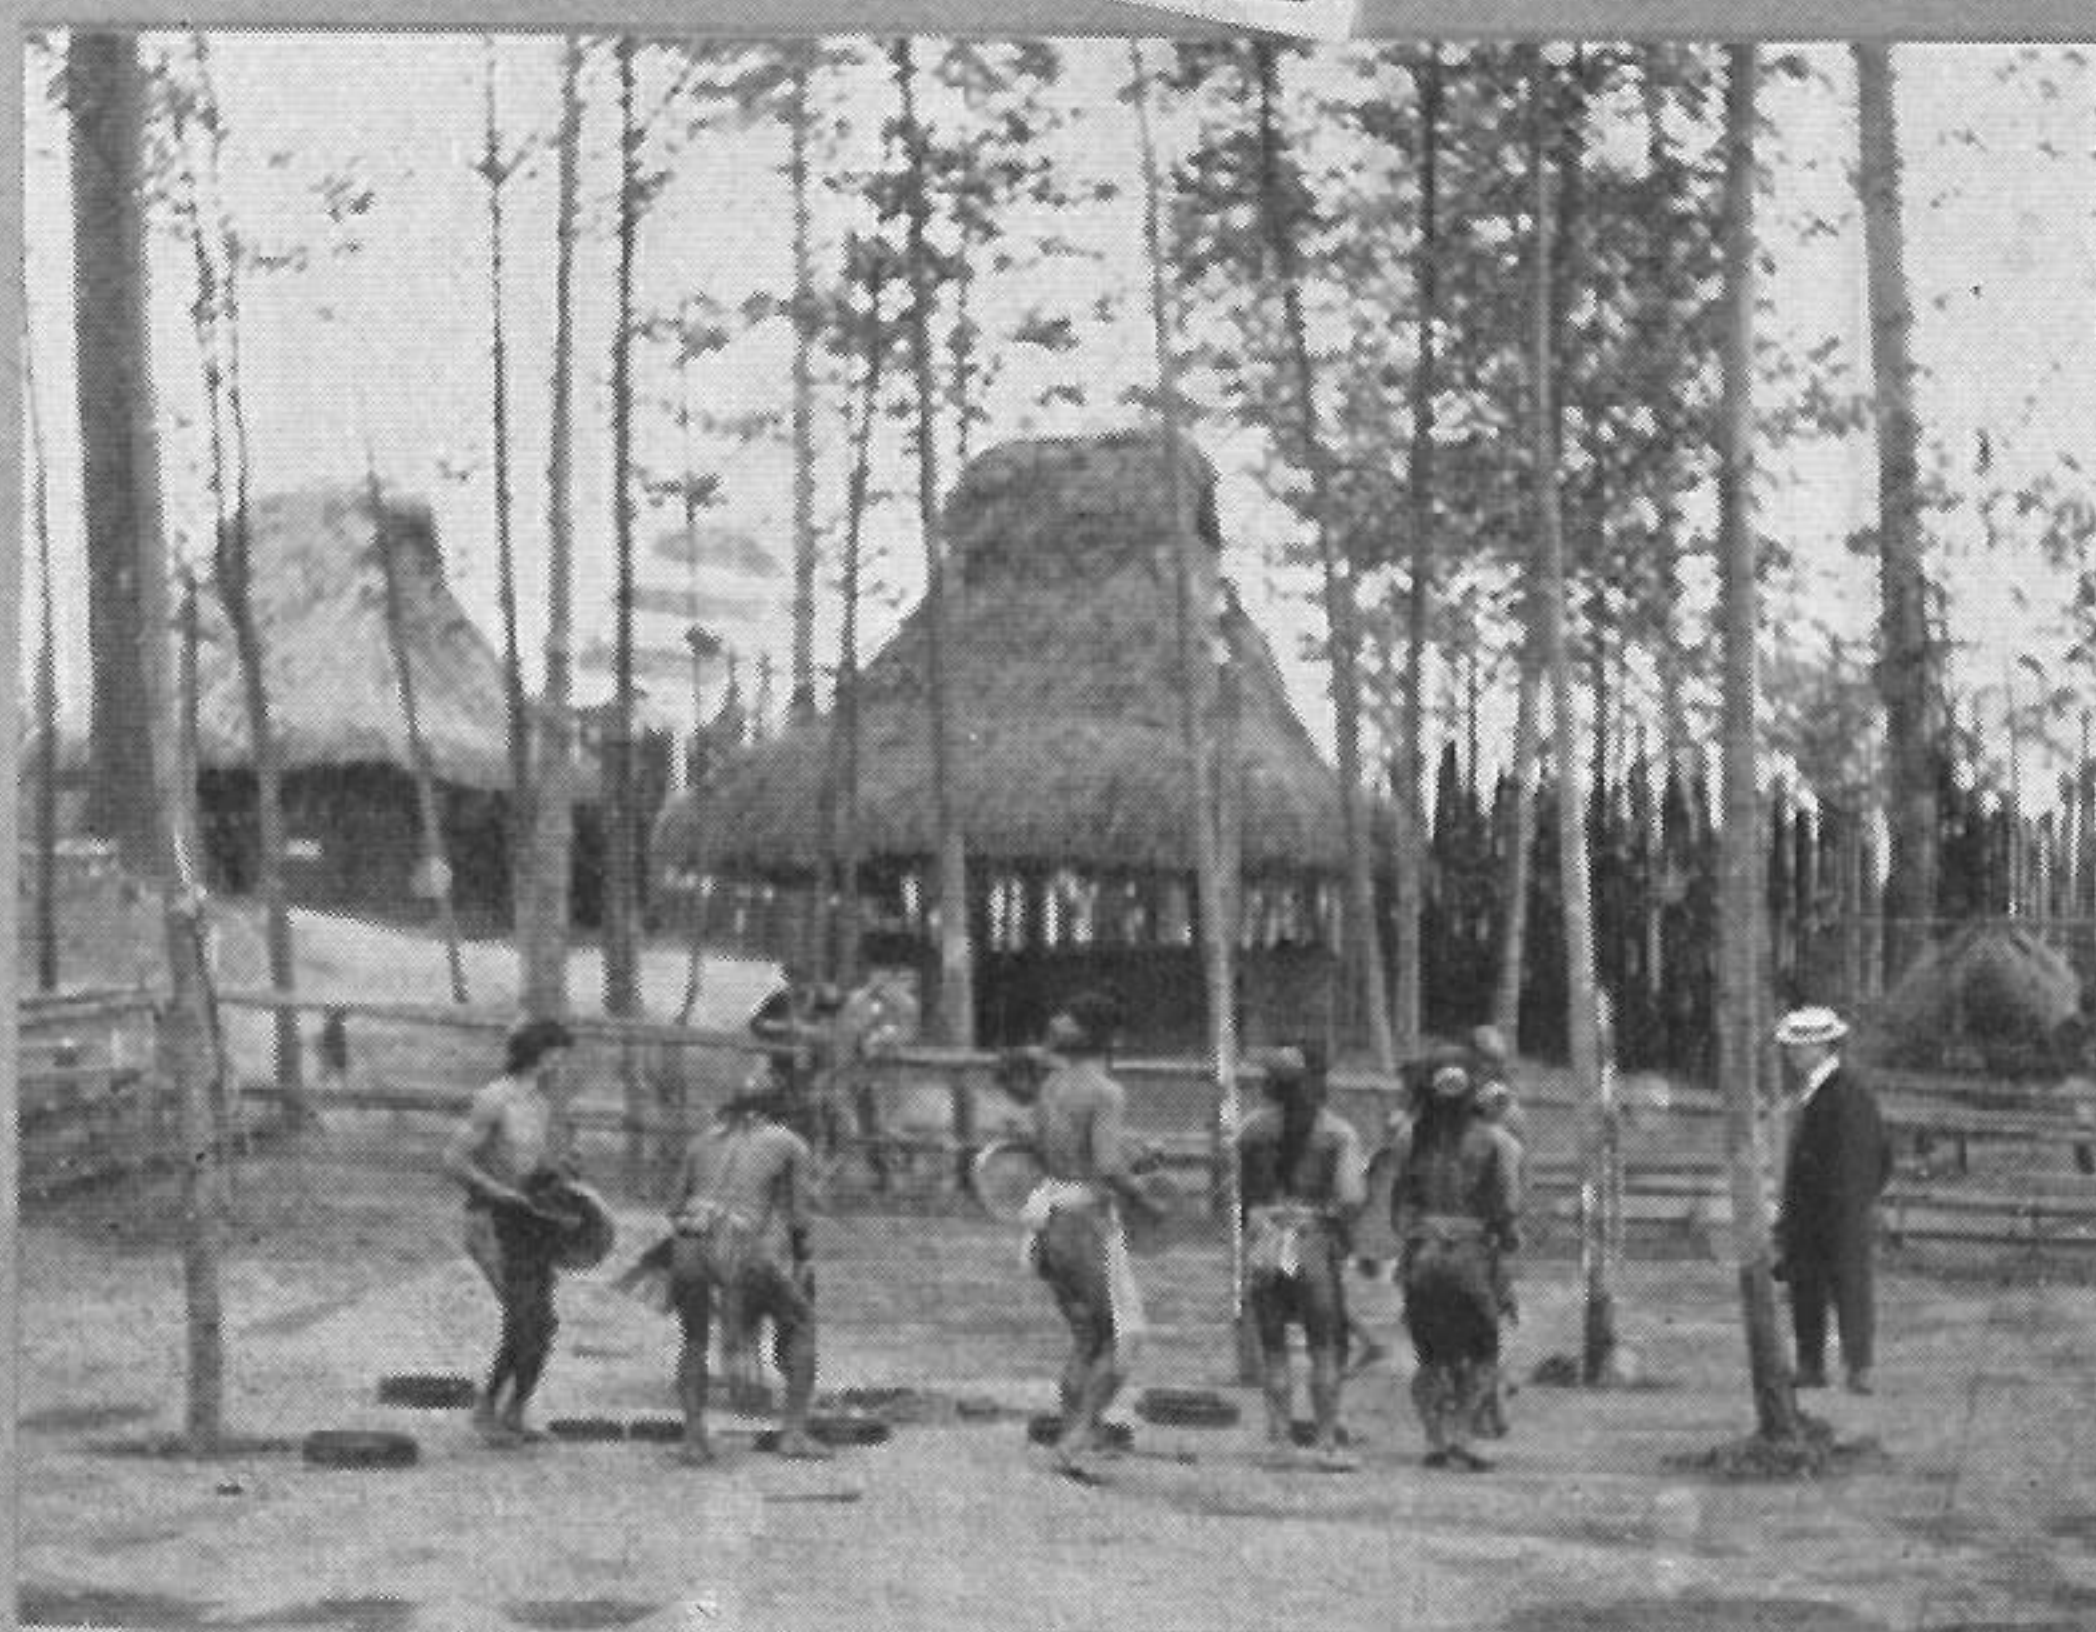

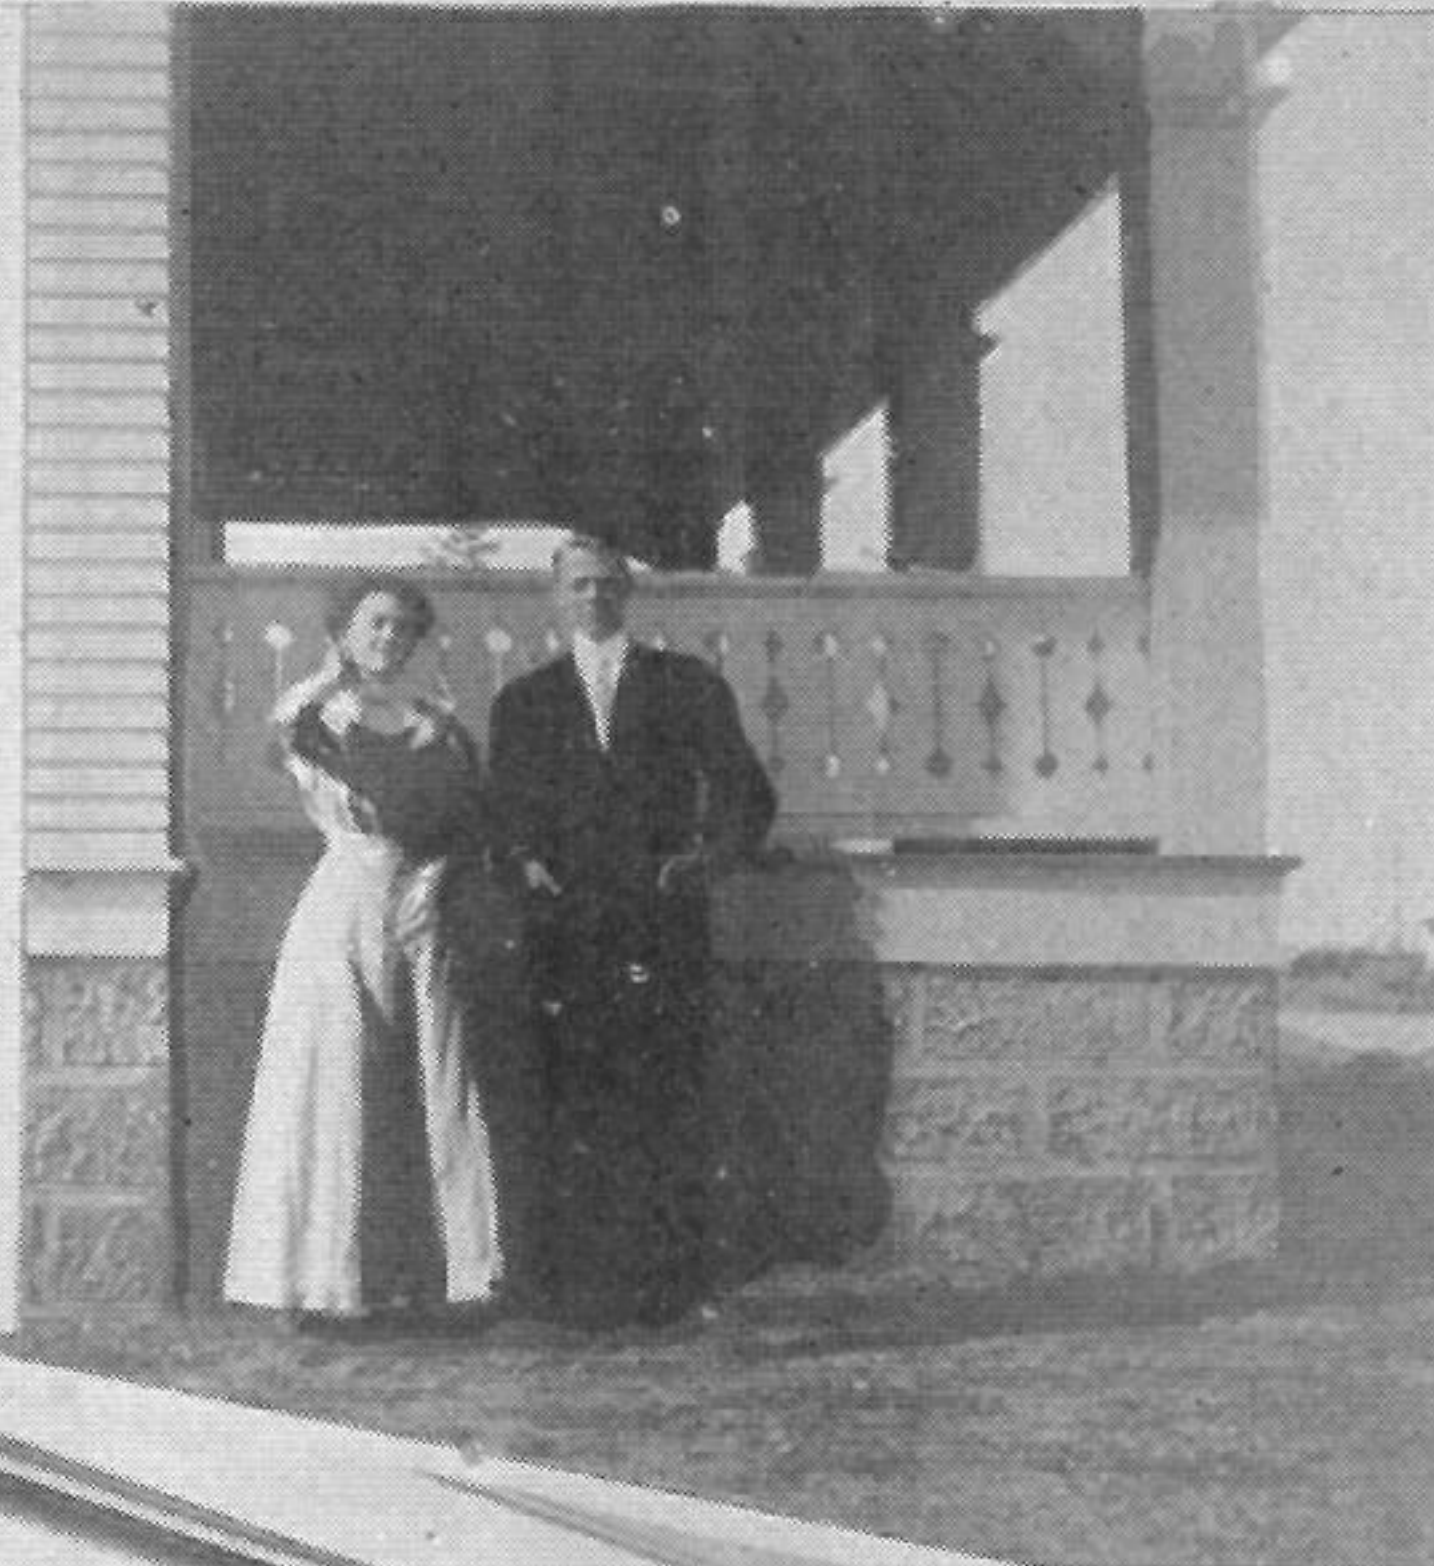

AS USUAL

"I don't know much about this ,and I don't seem to be able to place my fingers on the little I do know this morning."—Harold Stewart in Jurisprudence exams.

HINTS TO THE FRESHMEN NO. 3,457—

If you happen to be editor of a Junior Daily, it is perfectly proper for you to put your picture on the front page and use "I" at least seven times in the editorials. "I told you so."
